Little Old Lady

THE little old lady came into The Post and timidly sat on the edge of a chair.

Although the day was cool, she wore a blue gingham dress, a shapeless Panama hat atop her white hair, cotton stockings, and she held an old white purse tightly in one hand. Behind rimless glasses were the bluest eyes, with a friendly smile in them.

She said she was afraid she would prove to be a bother, but something was so strongly on her mind that she simply had to come in.

"I want to buy a Christmas present for a few of the boys overseas who would not get one otherwise," she said. "Boys in the most remote, the most lonesome places. Can you help me?"

The little old lady must have sensed the feeling of her listener that she would presently open her little purse and pull out a hard-earned $5 bill.

"I stopped at the bank and got this," she said, quickly.

And a trembling hand held out a certified check for $1000.

"Can it be done?" she asked, gently. "You know, for real lonesome boys."

The little old lady was told to come back next day. In the meantime The Post would find out what could be done.

ARMY chaplain headquarters said it was manna from heaven. Of course there were such boys, in unheard-of places. A general came over, and with the chaplains helped plan the Christmas boxes. The chaplains know what the boys want and need; but there will be a frivolous item or two for the little old lady—"soap that smells nice, or violet talcum powder."

When the little old lady came back she was delighted with the plan.

"Would it be too much trouble if I help to wrap the packages?" she asked.

She thought for a minute and then she said, "I only wish I knew how long I will live. I am 76 now. I think I will ask my banker what to do."

She went away, and returned in about an hour, beaming.

"Here, take this," she said—and she handed over another check for $1000.

THE POST asked the little old lady permission to use her name and take her picture. She smilingly shook her head. Nor would she tell where she lives.

"I like it better this way," she said. "I live in a nice little room in a hotel, and I have found a fine place to eat lunch. The folks line up on the sidewalk to get in, and every noon I stand in line and I meet the nicest people."

And away she went, pleased as could be.

There will be 400 of the little old lady's Christmas boxes flown to every corner of the earth.

A copy of this story will go in each box.

So, Soldier, when you explore this box, it will be nice to know that you never got a present in your young life from a lovelier lady—she looks just like your grandmother.

Father Draft Delay Demanded For Hoarder, Dodger Probe

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A three-month stay of the fathers' draft, "so we can investigate this manpower hoarding and pull slackers and draft dodgers out of the Government and war industries," yesterday was demanded in the Senate by Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana.

Wheeler launched a hopeless fight to halt the fathers' draft, starting Friday, before a Senate galleries packed mostly with women and children. He was challenged every step of the way by Senate leaders, who denied the Government is a haven for draft-dodgers, and said local boards have authority to sift deferments in industry.

In a letter, meanwhile, to Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt, Chairman Harry F. Byrd of the Joint Economy Committee charged "the Government itself is the chief hoarder of manpower," and asked for a comprehensive report to Congress "on the overmanning of Federal agencies." Byrd told newsmen he is opposed to the Wheeler bill, said he would follow General George C. Marshall and Admiral Ernest J. King on "measures necessary to win the war," but that the Government's 3,000,000 pool of Civil Service employes needs "a thorough overhauling."

Senate leaders delayed a decision on tactics until conclusion of today's debate, when Wheeler again will command the floor. At a conference late today they may decide whether to let the measure go to a showdown vote, whether to move to reconsider it, or whether to remove the teeth by a substitute measure. For any of the three alternatives, they appeared to have the votes.

Some leaders were known to favor substitution of the so-called Bailey-Clark and Taft amendments as a means of killing the Wheeler proposal. The Bailey-Clark amendment bans Federal employment of physically fit, military-age childless males unless they are certified as essential. The Taft amendment forces drafting of fathers under 30 ahead of older family heads. Neither ties Selective Service hands on drafting of fathers.

Holding the Senate floor for nearly five hours, Senator Wheeler insisted on flat postponement of the fathers' draft until January 1, reading letters charging industrial overmanning, and insisting "hundreds of thousands" of military-age

Doctor Admits Patients Tied At Gallinger

Alienist Testifies He Opposed Practice But Had No Choice

By Anne Hagner
Post Staff Writer

Strapping violent patients to their beds, although "not accepted treatment," is necessary at Gallinger Hospital because it lacks rooms in which they may be segregated, Dr. Joseph L. Gilbert, chief psychiatrist and alienist, yesterday told a Senate District subcommittee probing conditions at the institution.

"Restraining mentally disturbed patients is not accepted treatment," Dr. Gilbert admitted. "However, at Gallinger we are forced to do it for their own safety and that of others in their wards, as we have no facilities for segregation. I am against the practice and my superiors have statements from me to that effect."

Dr. Bocock to Testify

Yesterday's two-hour session, halted at noon when the bell rang for Senate roll call, was adjourned until 10 a. m. today, when Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent of the hospital, is expected to spend most of the morning on the witness stand.

"By what means are patients restrained?" Senator Bushfield (Republican) of South Dakota, who questioned the witnesses, asked Dr. Gilbert in a highlight of yesterday's hearing.

"With straps and leather wristlets," the psychiatrist replied.

"And how many are strapped down right now?" asked Senator Buck (Republican) of Delaware, presiding at the hearings.

Letter of Complaint

"Yesterday no more than 4 or 5; they are in wards with other patients, you see, and it is compulsory to restrain them. There is no way to avoid it."

Asked about patients being chained to their beds, as described in a letter read by Bushfield, Gilbert said, "We do not have chains. That is a misnomer."

"Do you uphold brutality?" Bushfield asked.

"Certainly not. Anyone who says that I do is badly distorting facts."

The letter read by Senator Bushfield, signed by a Washington resident, whose name he did not reveal, described Dr. Gilbert as "dis-

Butter's ration value will advance to 16 points a pound on October 3, the Office of Price Administration announced yesterday, placing it with dried beef slices in the highest point place on the ration chart.

At the same time, price ceilings on some types of poultry were reduced. Drawn poultry, which is just about ready to go into the pan when the butcher sells it, comes down 1 cent a pound under an order taking effect on processors October 12. The slightly less expensive dressed poultry—head and feet on—goes up a cent.

Production of butter fell 10 per cent during September, due to current milk crisis, which reached all dairy products, and to seasonal decreases. In addition, OPA said, consumption has remained so high near producing areas the value had to be raised to insure a more equitable distribution.

Surprise note on the new table for fats and oils was that beef point values remain unchanged and several pork cuts went up—despite record livestock and pig slaughtering.

Civilians also were warned not to expect many meat-value de-

British Told to Expect Less Food From America

London, Sept. 28 (AP).—Britons were told today they could expect food supplies from the United States to be curtailed in the near future.

William Mabane, parliamentary secretary to the Ministry of Food, said the "impact of war and in particular of the manpower draft on American domestic economy is likely to make surpluses of essential foodstuffs harder to come by."

But There's Still Time

D. C. Bond-Front Forces Falter As Yank Troops Smash Ahead

Home front troops in the District faltered yesterday in the desperate battle against inflation as their countrymen, showing more grit in their own right, smashed ahead in Italy.

Wavering of the home front army here was shown in the war bond sale slump. With but $2,600,000 in sales recorded yesterday, the total stood at $72,500,000 or only 77.1 per cent of the 94-million-dollar quota with four days to go.

Nationally, the counteroffensive against the threatening forces of grinding taxation and skyrocketing prices showed encouraging progress with only $775,000 needed to reach the national goal of 15 billions, as the Treasury reported an additional $420,000,000 in sales.

Officials are convinced that the American public is intelligent enough to realize the urgency of bond buying as a means of safeguarding their jobs and their homes, without the need of being filled with stories of soldiers going gunless because a bond wasn't sold.

The plain and deadly serious fact is that unless excess purchasing power is skimmed off by some method of saving, such as bond buying, prices of the limited quantity of civilian goods will rise as people with well-stuffed pocketbooks bid for them.

Higher prices lead to demand for salary increases; a race between the two sets in, and soon a point is reached where lifetime savings become worthless in terms of what they will buy.

Meanwhile, scattered reports from all sections of the Capital indicated that sales to individuals gained momentum as the city observed Service Flag Honor Day yesterday. Results of the day's solicitation were expected to be an-

Soft Underbelly

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Sept. 28.—The great Italian air base of Foggia and its 13 largely undamaged fields were captured Monday in a swift, 25-mile British armored lunge which increased the peril to German defenses of Naples through which the American Fifth Army advanced 2 to 5 miles.

Tonight, Hitler's Balkan satellites lay at the mercy of Allied Air Fleets which can strike from Foggia at Munich, the heart of Nazism; at Vienna, a key German aircraft center, and at the capitals of Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria. Conquered Greece, Yugoslavia and Albania also came under the shadow of Allied air power, as well as all northern and central Italy and southeast Germany.

Britons of the Fifth Army on the extreme left advanced two miles in bitter hand-to-hand fighting in mountains northwest of Salerno and tonight they could look down on the rail and road junction of Nocera, southeast of Vesuvius and 19 airline miles from Naples. The capture of Nocera would take the Allies to the edge of the Naples plain leading to the demolished port of 925,000 persons.

City of Melfi Falls

Americans inland on the right flank of Naples advanced 2 to 5 miles and captured Lioni and Castelnuovo. Lioni is 46 miles east of Naples on the railway crossing Italy to Bari. Castelnuovo is 57 miles east of Naples.

The historic City of Melfi, 75 miles east of Naples, also fell. It is 34 miles south of Foggia on an inland railway leading up from Potenza connecting with the Bari-Naples line.

(This dispatch did not specifically mention Venosa, the birthplace of Horace, which lies 8 miles east southeast of Melfi, but British vanguards had passed it on each side and indications were that that city also had fallen to the Allies.)

Nazi Position Perilous

The Germans on Corsica were retreating to San Stefano Hill, west of Bastia, and evacuated Aleria, 40 miles south of that northeast evacuation port, a French communique said. Mines and demolitions slowed the mopup, but the French declared they were inflicting severe losses and capturing prisoners.

Maryland Editor Indicted on Charge Of Criminal Libel

By the Associated Press

Princess Anne, Md., Sept. 28.—Rives Matthews, editor and publisher of the Somerset News, was indicted today on a charge of criminal libel growing out of articles published about State Comptroller J. Millard Tawes.

Matthews was released immediately under $500 bond furnished by C. Edwin Hayman. When the charges were preferred against him in June and Matthews was arraigned before Trial Magistrate Fred N. Holland, bond for the publisher was set at $2500.

Matthews wrote several articles in his paper in which he accused Tawes of misuse of gasoline ration coupons on a trip to Georgia. Tawes was exonerated by a Somerset County Rationing Board of violating the pleasure driving ban. But later the State Office of Price Administration revoked his personal and official gasoline ration books, giving him the right to apply for a new ration for official driving.

Gen. Marshall Announcement Is Withheld

President Roosevelt yesterday declined to make any statement regarding reports Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, would become Anglo-American commander in chief, saying any announcement of this nature involved questions of timing—apparently meaning military timing.

At the same time, both the White House and General Marshall evidenced concern over the comment of some Congressmen and newspapers which read political implications into the reported transfer.

Members of the House Military Affairs Committee quoted Marshall as stating that such comment is "doing great harm to the war effort." They said they were protesting against the charges of political tampering with the Army in his name and at his request.

The legislators stated that they had been assured both by General

Convoy Action

Destruction of three German submarines and the damaging of a fourth by a single American plane flying from an escort carrier on Atlantic convoy duty was reported by the Navy yesterday.

Lieut. Robert Pershing Williams, 26, Snoqualmie, Wash., scored the heavy damage on these undersea raiders. He was flying a Grumman Avenger bomber, with Morris C. Grinstead, radioman, 21, Letts, Iowa, and Melvin H. Paden, machinist mate, 19, Salinas, Calif., as his crew.

Three of the submarines went to the bottom and a total of about 65 German crewmen were rescued from the sea by destroyers. The fourth submarine left only a huge oil slick on the surface, and was recorded only as "possibly damaged."

First Attack Made

The first of the series of attacks by Williams' bombing plane came in midafternoon when Paden sighted the wake of a large submarine. The raider was strafed by a fighter plane piloted by Lieut. (j. g.) Earl H. Steiger, 24, Buffalo, N. Y.

Then Williams roared in on his bombing run, and the bombs straddled the submarine about 25 feet

Russians Put Vital Rail Line In Gun Range

Soviets Threaten Collapse of Nazis' Upper Dnieper Front

London (Wednesday), Sept. 29.—Red armies pursuing a badly mauled and disorganized enemy into White Russia captured more than 1160 villages yesterday, putting the Gomel-Vitebsk railway within artillery range and threatening the early collapse of Germany's upper Dnieper line, Moscow disclosed early today.

A Soviet bulletin said German troops falling back on Vitebsk were blowing up bridges and dynamiting installations as the Russians closed in on that upper White Russian city, key to Poland and the Baltic states. The Red vanguard was believed to be only 10 miles away.

Two hundred miles to the south the Russians reached a point only 11 miles outside Gomel, junction of five railways, on the heels of a "disorganized enemy," the Soviet communique said.

Between Gomel and Vitebsk other units forced the Germans to abandon "one position after another," the communique said, in the race toward Mogilev and Orsha.

3 Allied Raiders Lost; Aussie Units Closing in On Finschhafen

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific (Wednesday), Sept. 29.—A surprise heavy air attack, lasting an hour and a half, on the Japanese shipping roadstead and airdromes at Wewak, New Guinea, Monday sank seven ships of a newly arrived convoy and destroyed approximately 60 planes, 50 of them on the ground.

Three tankers were enveloped in flames and four merchantmen were blasted from mast height, at a cost of only three raiders from antiaircraft fire, today's communique said.

The destruction in the area was so great that headquarters said Wewak once again has been rendered impotent as an enemy operational base.

In addition to the 50 planes caught on the ground, 8 out of 20 enemy fighters which intercepted weakly were shot down and 3 others probably were destroyed.

The raiders, attacking in a sector approximately 300 miles northwest of the present ground fighting zone on New Guinea, also destroyed 29 barges or luggers.

460 Since Mid-August

On Sunday, prior to the big Wewak raid, fighters attacked that sector, shooting down at least six enemy planes and probably a seventh.

The total plane bag raised to more than 460 the number of enemy aircraft destroyed in the Wewak sector since mid-August.

In the tense ground battle for Finschhafen on New Guinea's Huon Peninsula, Australian veteran troops have inflicted heavy casualties just north of the town between the base and the Bumi River. In that area, where the Aussies are within less than a mile of their objective, progress has been slowed up by prepared enemy positions. Allied artillery is pounding the base "in all areas," the communique said, adding that Jap planes caused light casualties in raids on Aussie positions.

Twenty-five Japanese planes raided northwestern Australia, the communique said, striking at Drysdale Mission.

A strong force of both heavy and medium bombers, escorted by fighters, attacked the Wewak sector at treetop and mast height levels. The merchantmen sunk ranged in tonnage up to 5000-ton vessels.

The aircraft destruction was wrought on the fields of Wewak, Boram, Dagua and But.

Caught by Surprise

The raiders caught the enemy by surprise, as has been the case on several other recent raids and the bulk of the planes were on the ground.

In the Solomons, the Japanese air force continued active in the vicinity of American-occupied Vella Lavella. An enemy force of 18 dive-bombers and 20 fighters was intercepted and driven off by American fighter patrols which, without loss to themselves, shot down one Japanese fighter.

American torpedo and dive-bombers, screened by fighters, attacked gun positions and the airdrome at Vila, on Kolombangara Island, which lies between Vella Lavella and American-held New Georgia.

Marines Plant U.S. Flag on Nanumea

Pearl Harbor, Sept. 28 (AP).—Occupation of Nanumea, northernmost isle of the Ellice group, by United States Marines on September 4 was disclosed by Pacific fleet headquarters today.

The island, useful probably for the construction of an airfield, is about 450 statute miles southeast of the major Japanese Gilbert Islands air base of Tarawa, recently attacked by both land-based and carrier-based American planes, along with three other Jap bases.

Magnuson May Lodge Protest On 'Pattern' of FCC Probe

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Representative Magnuson (Democrat) of Washington said yesterday that he intended to inspect portions of the testimony before the House committee investigating the Federal Communications Commission to determine whether the committee had gone far afield from the authority granted it by Congress.

Reports have indicated that the committee has done so, Magnuson charged, and he said he had obtained 23 volumes of the recorded testimony presented to the committee, including that taken in closed hearings. If the reported pattern of the investigation is borne out by the transcript, Magnuson said that he would file a formal protest with the committee.

He said, too, that he plans to confer with Representative Hart (Democrat) of New Jersey next week on operations of the investigation. Both are members of the committee. In policy, however, they represent a minority, with Representative Cox (Democrat) of Georgia and two Republican members forming the working majority.

Magnuson did not attend the summer committee hearings, having gone home with the understanding that none was to be held during the congressional recess.

The transcript was turned over to the Washingtonian following a committee meeting in which it was agreed to resume formal public

War Sidelights

Nazi Labor Chief Killed In France

London, Sept. 28 (AP).—The chief of the German manpower organization in France, Julius Ritter, 50, has been assassinated, according to a Berlin broadcast recorded by Reuters tonight.

Several "terrorists" shot Ritter as he was leaving his home by automobile, the broadcast said.

New Denmark Terror

Stockholm, Sept. 28. (AP).—A new reign of terror began in Denmark today as Gen. Kurt Daluege, ruthless trouble shooter for Heinrich Himmler's Gestapo, took over control of the country from Gen. Hermann von Hannecken, who has been military dictator since August 29.

The Stockholm newspaper Dagens Nyheter said that one of Daluege's first acts was to start, under the personal orders of Adolf Hitler, the deportation of 6000 Danish Jews.

U. S. Bombers Hit Akyab in Raids on Jap Line in Burma

By the Associated Press

New Delhi, Sept. 28.—American Liberators smashed at the port of Akyab on the west coast of Burma yesterday as Allied bombers continued their assaults on Japanese communications and supply lines.

A U. S. Tenth Air Force communique said the four-engined bombers scored hits on the jetty and damaged a nearby harbor area.

At the same time, American medium Mitchells pounded rail yards at Pyawbwe, in central Burma, 95 miles south of Mandalay, and other formations attacked Kyaukse, about 30 miles south of Mandalay.

The headquarters bulletin also told of raids by heavy bombers the previous day on rail yards at Letpadan, about 70 miles north of Rangoon.

All of the American planes returned safely on the widespread operations.

Earlier, a British communique reported that RAF Beaufighters and Hurricanes blasted yesterday at Japanese rail installations and river transport in western Burma.

Spirit of Invasion Reported to Be Sweeping France

Madrid, Sept. 28 (AP).—With virtually all of Corsica in Allied hands, invasion psychology was reported today to be sweeping France.

"Never before have Frenchmen followed so attentively instructions of the London radio," said a correspondent of the Madrid newspaper Ya in a dispatch from Vichy. Travelers reaching Madrid from France told of witnessing anti-German demonstrations by French war workers in the streets of Toulouse and Saint Denis last week.

In Toulouse the demonstrators marched through the streets shouting "down with Laval," according to the accounts.

RAF Batters Nazi Industrial City 2d Time in Week

Gladwin Hill
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 28.—Mixing its punches with the skill and power of a champion boxer, the RAF's great bomber fleet smashed the big German industrial center of Hanover last night for the second time within a week, quickly followed up yesterday's Flying Fortress raid on the North Sea port of Emden, and pounded the metal and machinery center of Brunswick.

The Air Ministry said that the three attacks were made in "very great strength," and that 38 of the big bombers were lost. Returning crewmen reported tremendous flames were eating through Hanover, which bore the brunt of the assault.

Nazis Kept on Jump

The night's operations carried a number of significant indications of the greatly expanded scope of the Britain-based air campaign against the Germans. Again the RAF switched its main objective hundreds of miles, keeping the Nazis scrambling to concentrate their thinly-spread defensive forces where they are most needed.

All month the British bombers have been alternating in jabs at Germany's "jaw" around Berlin and the north, and her "solar plexus," the Rhineland industrial area 300 miles to the southwest, with occasional punches at her "heart" around Munich, 300 miles south of the capital.

Last night's was the RAF's second three-ply blow within five days. Last Thursday night it bombed the twin cities of Mannheim-Ludwigshafen and Darmstadt and Aachen. Such a diversion of attack, with the emphasis on one target, keeps the Germans guessing right up to the last minute where to throw the bulk of their fighters.

Apparently Marked for Death

Hanover, site of the Nazis' biggest rubber factory, as well as numerous oil refineries and motor factories, apparently has been marked for death, as was Hamburg. A week ago the RAF rained an estimated 2000 long tons of explosives on the city, and last night's attack was thought possibly to have been equally devastating.

Emden, which may also have been checked off as an obliteration target, is the terminus of the Dortmund-Ems Canal, which carries war materials to the industrial Ruhr. It inherited much of the shipping that once passed through Rotterdam, and since the destruction of Hamburg it has been Germany's only big North Sea port handling mainly merchant shipping. Wilhelmshaven and Bremen are devoted mainly to shipbuilding and naval traffic.

Given No Respite

The RAF attack meant that just as Emden's citizens were struggling against the fires set by the American Flying Fortreses some 12 hours before, a new deluge of high explosives sent them again underground and augmented the destruction.

The raid on Brunswick, hit only twice before in the war, along with recent attacks on seldom-bombed places like Darmstadt and Aachen, showed that the RAF, besides increasing the strength of its attacks against the big centers like Berlin, still is expanding the scope of its operations.

It all bulked into a comprehensive, over-all air campaign calculated to cripple the Nazis' will and means to resist.

Fifth Major Blow

Special attention obviously is being paid to the enemy's synthetic rubber production. The raid on Hanover was the fifth major blow at German rubber centers within four months. Flying Fortresses struck at Huls in June, and in July they pasted the gigantic Continental Gummiewerke plant in Hanover. Earlier in September, the RAF made one of its saturation attacks on the Dunlop factory at Montlucon, France.

Brunswick, although not known to harbor a rubber plant, is important for its metal and machinery industries. It is 53 miles northwest of Magdeburg, on the main railway line from Berlin.

RAF Intruder craft also bored into northwest Germany and over Holland during the night and reported destruction of seven enemy planes. A small number of German planes were over eastern England, but the Air Ministry said damage and casualties were slight.

Today's German war communique said 56 British bombers, mostly four-engined, were shot down during the night's "terror" raids and that some damage was done to residential quarters.

Brazil Ready to Join Allies, Gen. Dutra Says

Rio de Janeiro, Sept. 28 (AP).—Gen. Eurico Gaspar Dutra, Brazilian War Minister, said today that "all details already are established between Brazil and the United States for participation of a Brazilian expeditionary force in active war."

He made the statement at his first press conference since his return from the United States.

American Soldiers Battling Mountain Barrier to Naples

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

With the American Fifth Army in Italy, Sept. 26 (Delayed).—Hannibal crossing the Alps with his elephant didn't have a task half as arduous as the American soldiers now fighting their way through the rugged mountains that form a barrier to the plain of Naples.

The shovel and the bayonet, the bulldozer and the hand grenade share the work. Bridges and roads must be built while an enemy clever at defensive withdrawals is being driven from the next hill. Moving elephant would be small-time stuff compared with this.

Astounding Speed

Although from a distance the forward movement of the Army may seem slow, here on the ground, watching the obstacles being overcome one by one, it seems incredibly fast. Prisoners taken recently have volunteered the information that the Germans are astounded by the rapidity with which the American engineers rebuilt the bridges they had blown up.

Across a precipitous canyon the Germans expected it would take three weeks to bridge, the Americans put a new span in 36 hours, and the commanding officer said, "We should have built it in 12 hours less."

Here is the way this type of warfare works: The Germans are retreating through the mountains. A few roads coil and wind through the valleys and snake along the mountainsides. Occasionally they drop down into a precipitous gorge and cross a bridge at the bottom of the gorge.

Blast Bridges, Lay Mines

In such instances the Germans blow up the bridge. Then they bury mines in the rubble and the road and leave a small force, carefully hidden, which covers the spot with mortars and machine guns.

It is impossible to blast the Germans out of their caves and hiding places with artillery. So the infantry takes to the woods and sneaks up on them. A hand-to-hand battle with bayonets and hand grenades results. Once the place has been cleaned out, the engineers start rebuilding the bridge.

By the time it is finished, the whole thing is being repeated a little farther up the road.

Too, the work is interrupted now and then by Messerschmitts which sneak in to strafe, or by shells from mobile German artillery.

Villages Reduced to Rubble

The Germans also have a habit of using the small mountain towns as temporary fortresses in their delaying campaign. They hide 88-mm. guns in narrow streets, counting on thick stone walls of the houses for protection and cover. It becomes necessary to blast them out with artillery and planes. As a result the quaint Italian villages, with their air of peaceful antiquity, are being reduced to rubble one after another.

Then there is the dust. The white dirt roads have been pulverized to powder. Each jeep has a streamer of dust behind it. Each tank or tank destroyer sends up a dense cloud. Soldiers have a ghostly appearance, their clothing and helmets white with dust. Their dust goggles stare hollowly from chalk-white faces.

This is bad enough; but it will be worse when the rains come. The rains are overdue now, and when they come, all of this dust will become mud.

Mules Pressed Into Service

To flank the roads and take possession of the high ground, the American units take to the hills. Then the supply problem becomes difficult. Mules captured from the Italians in Sicily carry packs of supplies up roadless mountainsides. Once, there were not even any mules around. A unit of infantry was turned into a pack outfit. It was impossible for a man to carry a load of supplies on his back very far in that rugged terrain, so the soldiers went in pairs. One man would carry the load for a while and the other would walk baide him. When the first man became exhausted, the other took the load, and so on until the outfit in the hills was reached.

Although this hill fighting means heavy toil, there is considerable rivalry among the American units. If one gets a little farther up its road than the next, the latter puts on a spurt to catch up. But the main thing is that they are always moving ahead.

Wounded Guerilla Fighters Stifle Cries on Perilous Front

By Richard Tregaskis
International News Service Staff Writer

With the Fifth Army in Italy, Sept. 28.—The wounded certainly don't cry on this western Italian front, for here guerilla fighting is the rule and they have been specifically tutored not to cry.

In this thickly wooded precipitous mountain country, the outcry of a wounded man might lead the enemy to his comrades in arme atlhoughou other means of detection would be difficult.

According to Major Max M. Schneider of Shenandoah, Iowa, who incidentally was the first man of the American invading forces to set foot on Italy—men have carried out that rule to the point of heroism.

The Major cited a case where one of his men, who though painfully shot through both feet by machine gun bullets, crawled about a mile and a half over the steep mountainous countryside without uttering a sound of complaint. He finally reached a spot where he could be carried piggy-back by his comrades.

Then there was a lad from California, a Korean, who was hit in the back of the head by a bullet which came out through his eye, and struck by another bullet through the neck. Yet he did not cry out and even made his way under his own power, a distance of 30 or 40 yards, to a point in the rear from where he could be carried out. Now he is said to be recovering nicely despite the loss of one eye.

A lieutenant at Castellamare led his patrol through their mission even though he was shot in the jaw. And a corporal, though shot in the hip and foot, crawled to an evacuation point without so much as uttering a whisper.

Yes, the wounded among those crack guerilla troops don't cry. And that, in view of their record, is the merest understatement.

'Monty's' Fortress Crewmen Find He's a Friend Indeed

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Sept. 28.—The American Flying Fortress crew which for three months ferried British Gen. Bernard L. Montgomery on his travels about North Africa was headed for Cairo, but Staff Sergt. Charles Geyer, of Edison, Ohio, wasn't looking forward with any eagerness to his stay in the Egyptian capital.

"General Montgomery asked me was I all set for a good time," Geyer related today at the 36th st. Army air base. "I told him yes, but I didn't have much money.

"So Monty grinned and told me, 'Don't worry about money. I'll fix it up with with Eisenhower.'

"And he did. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower wired Cairo and we got advance partial payment when we arrived there with General Montgomery."

Geyer and his fellow crew members were ordered to rest and assigned to take over the plane assigned to the leader of the British Eighth Army.

"We flew Monty from April 15 to June 15 wherever he wanted to go," Geyer said.

"Man to man, he was like a noncom to us," he said. "He was informal, and considerate, and cheerful. He liked us to call him Monty."

Australia Knows Of No Plans to Affect MacArthur

Canberra, Sept. 28 (AP).—The Australian government knows nothing of any change in command for Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Prime Minister John Curtin said today.

Curtin declared in the House of Representatives that "as the commonwealth government is a party to arrangements relating to the higher direction of the war in the Southwest Pacific area, no change could be made without its agreement."

MacArthur himself raised the question of his future status with the cryptic statement last Wednesday that "however subordinate may be my role, I hope to play it manfully."

Of reports that MacArthur's command would be subordinated to that recently established under Lord Louis Mountbatten in southeast Asia, Curtin said:

"The appointment of Mountbatten . . does not impinge in any way on General MacArthur's command . . . nor subordinate the southwest Pacific to the southeast Asia command."

Fall of Foggia New Peril to Balkans, Reich

of Germans hemmed in at Bastia and that Nazis fleeing in small boats were brought under fire of Allied batteries.

(President Roosevelt described the capture of Foggia as one of the most important strategical Allied victories of the war.)

Foggia was a prize of importance equal to or even greater than that of Naples because of its airfields.

The swift advance of the mobile British column prevented the enemy from destroying or damaging the airfields, which, however, have been battered frequently by Allied bombers. The airfields will need little work to become suitable for Flying Fortresses, Liberators and Marauders.

"It is obvious that the Allied advance in the east has made perilous the German position in the Naples area," an Allied spokesman said, pointing out that Foggia lies 80 miles northeast of Naples.

"The Eighth Army advance was made possible because the enemy was putting his greatest strength against the Fifth Army north of Salerno."

The British raced into Foggia at 3 p. m. yesterday after inflicting "considerable casualties" on the Germans in their advance. From all indications, the German resistance in Foggia itself was slight and the British were able to overrun Marshal Albert Kesselring's rear guards.

Foggia is the most important strategic city captured in the Italian campaign. Its airfields are within 580 miles of the Ploesti oil fields in Rumania, without which German machines would thirst to death. They lie 465 miles from Vienna and 500 miles from Munich. The main field is Foggia Gino Lisa. The satellites of varying size and equipment extend as far as 23 miles from the city.

Foggia, a city of 85,000, is a major railway center. An electric line links it with Naples. Multiple tracks lead to Bari and Brindisi and a single line extends to Potenza. All these cities, except Naples, are in Allied hands. Still other railways link Foggia to the German-held cities of Pescara, Ravenna and Ancona and to the Gargano peninsula which lies like a spur on the Italian boot. Six major highways radiate in all directions. Foggia is 190 airline miles north of the tip of the Italian heel.

Menaces Greece

The Foggia plain extends another 50 miles north in which there is no suitable defense line. It lies only 35 miles east of the road junction of Vinchiatura, leading through the wide Calore River mountain pass to points behind Naples.

Possession of the Foggia air fields menaced the Germans in Greece particularly, because these Nazis depend on a single railroad down the Vardar Valley for the bulk of their supplies. This narrow, twisting road with many bridges is less than 300 miles from Foggia and can be easily cut.

From Foggia, the Allies can throw long-range fighters over the Yugoslav Adriatic coast which the Germans are having a hard time policing since the Italian surrender. These fighters and bombers could support Yugoslav guerillas or an Allied expeditionary force, if necessary.

United States naval units patrolled southern Italian waters near Naples "standing by to support land operations," General Eisenhower's communique said.

German defense of Naples remained stubborn, though costly. Prisoners from the Sixteenth German Armored Division said their outfit had lost half its men as casualties fighting the Fifth Army.

Flanking Units Move Up

The capture of Melfi represented a 5-mile advance beyond the previously reported Allied position and placed the attackers within the road network of the area leading to the back door of Naples.

Kesselring's defense positions around Naples became increasingly untenable as the Fifth Army drove flanking columns forward to the east.

Continued bad weather deprived the Allies of all but small air cover. Fighter-bombers attacked the Viterbo airfield, 40 miles north of Rome, and a seaplane base at Lake di Bracciano.

The raiders caught between 25 and 40 enemy planes on the ground at the Viterbo field, and left 5 in flames and many others damaged. In addition, a Junkers-52 transport was shot down over the field.

At Lake di Bracciano, also north of Rome, 5 of 13 anchored seaplanes attacked were left afire.

These daring raids were carried out before bad weather closed down over Italy, grounding all Allied heavy and medium bombers. Kitty bombers and P-40 Warhawks attacked trains and a railroad station north of Pont Della Penna on the Adriatic coastal line north of Foggia.

Germans Grab Rex, Italy's Famous Liner

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the Badoglio Government in Italy ,Sept. 26 (Delayed).—Italian naval officers said today that the liner Rex has fallen into the hands of the Germans at Trieste and that the Conte di Savoia was scuttled by her crew at Venice.

These ships were the largest and fastest of the Italian merchant marine and formerly made the Genoa-Naples-New York run.

The passenger liners Giulio Cesare and Duilio, 24,000 tons each, were scuttled by their crews in the northern Adriatic, these officers said.

The twin motorships Vulcania and Saturnia, also formerly of the North Atlantic run, were converted into naval training ships. Both left northern Adriatic ports for the south, manned by cadets. The Vulcania was captured by the Germans on the way but the Saturnia reached a port controlled by the Allies, the officers said.

They disclosed also that the battleship Cavour, which was hit by a 16-inch shell from a British warship in a naval battle early in the war and afterward was torpedoed and sunk in Taranto harbor, had been raised. They did not know its present whereabouts, however.

They likewise did not know the whereabouts of Italy's newest warship, the Impero, which had been completed except for an electrical system. Many merchant ships, including a large number taken from the French, were reported in Genoa harbor, which is in German hands.

War Far From Won, Byrnes Warns U. S.

Civilians Facing Greater Strain, War Department Conference Told

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Civilians face "greater, not lesser strains" because the war is still far from won, War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes informed a War Department conference of industry, labor, and newspaper leaders at Fort Belvoir, Va., yesterday after WPB Vice Chairman Charles E. Wilson stated that "drastic and difficult shifts" must be made in the war production program to give it a scheduled 80-billion-dollar punch next year.

Warning that "home front" dissension can prolong the war, Byrnes said, "We are not as near winning the war today as the Germans were in the summer of 1940 or the Japs were immediately after Pearl Harbor."

Production for This Year

The War Production Board executive, speaking with the aid of charts which graphically depicted the problems of next year, disclosed that this country will produce approximately 63 billion dollars' worth of war munitions this year. War goods are pouring out today at the rate of 65 billions a year, with prospects of reaching an annual rate in excess of 75 billions before the end of 1943, Wilson said.

"The record as a whole is one of which you and the Nation legitimately may be proud," Wilson said.

Pointing out that the combined Axis production was five times our production in 1940, he said that our production this year is twice as much as the combined Axis production might be, with next year's schedules calling for "well over" twice as much.

Vast Supplies to Allies

Earlier, Lieut. Col. William S. Gaud, jr., of the Army General Staff, disclosed that this year's lend-lease program calls for the shipment of 5.4 billion dollars worth of military goods to our allies, with about the same amount scheduled for next year. Perhaps hinting the direction of next year's invasion campaigns, he said that 10 per cent of the 1944 shipments has been earmarked for such countries as France, Belgium, Norway and Greece.

James P. Mitchell, director of the Army's industrial personnel division, asserted that a national service law is "badly needed" if labor supply is to match labor demand for war purposes.

"The American people are not demobilized for war," Mitchell said, defending the War Department's persistent advocacy of a compulsory labor draft.

"A far smaller proportion of our population of working age is either at work or in the armed forces than in any other major nation at war. We have hardly touched the vast reserve of potential war workers in nonmanufacturing, construction, trade and services, or in agriculture, which has increased its employment."

Basic Facts Told

In its second and final day, the conference was called by Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson for the purpose of giving industry and labor the basic facts of our military production efforts to dispel the belief that the war is about over.

Byrnes told the conference that too much thinking about reconversion of war plants to peacetime pursuits would "delay the coming of the peace." However, he assured the conferees that the Government had assigned "competent officials to devote their thought to the subject."

"In each department," the war mobilizer said, "at least one official should be assigned to the subject. We are a peaceful Nation and were unprepared for war, but, being a peaceful Nation, we must not be unprepared for peace."

He cautioned against counting on a breakdown of German morale similar to the 1918 breakdown.

Surrender Not in Sight

"There is no excuse for the prevalent belief that we will receive the unconditional surrender of the Axis powers in the near future," Byrnes said.

"The road to Berlin and Tokyo is still a long, hard and bloody road. We may look for dissension inside Germany, but if we are honest with ourselves, we will admit that there is little evidence of it. Time and again, the German people have proved that they can take it.

Pointing out that signs of dissension inside the United States would strengthen the enemy's "will to fight," Byrnes added that "It is by no means clear that we are as united on our home front as are our enemies."

As for civilians, he said that he was interested in avoiding waste of military supplies, but was sure that "none are interested in diverting manpower and materials from the war effort."

Calls for Civilian Effort

"We cannot expect to make civilian life easier at the expense of military requirements," Byrnes said. "First things must come first."

Wilson said that the greatest production increases must be made in aircraft to provide 50 per cent greater production next year over this year.

"The step-up will call for gigantic effort," he said. "The increased volume of the new and improved models we want will be hard to get."

As for the ground army, Wilson said that changes in the program will present the main problems—shifting over from "capital equipment" to so-called "expendable" items—operational and maintenance supplies like ammunition.

He expressed hope that the American people would understand the need to slow down and shut down some programs while others are being expanded, but admitted that "it will hurt."

"A great job has been done," Wilson said, "but a greater job is still ahead. We are in sight of our overall peaks."

Patterson Closes Session

Patterson summed up the conference at the conclusion with the following comment:

"The war is going better—much better than it has been. We have the initiative. Provided we have the will and determination for victory, victory is within our grasp.

"A fateful year is ahead—a year of victory and defeats. We pray victory will predominate. It is a year in which our painful preparations ought to be brought to bear on the enemy in Europe and Asia. It will be a year of personal tragedy for many. We have strong hopes, unequaled resources, and brave and valiant Allies."

Other speakers included Lieut. Gen. William S. Knudsen, Col. Lee A. Benson, jr., acting director of the Army Service Forces Requirements Division; Joseph M. Dodge, chairman of the War Department's Price Adjustment Board, and William L. Marbury, general counsel of the Purchases Division of the Army Service Forces.

Nazis Claim Occupation of Corfu, Say Split Is Retaken

By William Smith White
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 28.—The Germans announced today that their southern European forces, already spread thin, had occupied the Greek island of Corfu in the Ionian Sea opposite the heel of Italy, and the Yugoslav Adriatic harbor town of Split 300 miles to the north.

Both moves, perhaps bold in view of the weakening Axis position in this part of Europe, apparently were made in an effort to strengthen the German Balkan flank against the new and grave menace arising from the Allied capture of the big Italian air base of Foggia, only 150 miles from the already hotly contested Yugoslav coast.

A Yugoslav authority in London declared that Split was still in patriot hands. Tonight's communique from the Yugoslav army of liberation, recorded by the Associated Press, told of heavy fighting in the mountains 15 miles northeast of Split and said German pressure had increased in the last 48 hours.

Farther north the battle for Susak, near Fiume, appeared in doubt. The communique said street fighting was "still in progress" at the Croatian port.

In the south the patriots were declared to have won the towns of Gacko, in southern Hercegovina, and Plevlje, in Montenegro.

The Berlin radio said Corfu was occupied after "an ultimatum to the Badoglio troops, which held the island, was refused." The Germans were said to have occupied the entire island and to have taken several thousand prisoners "after a short fight."

Despite the reported occupation of Split, the Nazi high command acknowledged that "strong groups" still were fighting German forces both in northeastern Italy and along the Dalmatian coast of Yugoslavia.

By these announcements, the German leadership implied that Allied action against the Balkans was expected imminently and also that guerilla forces and Italians now loyal to the Allies were already seriously endangering the German position in the south.

On Corfu, for example, the German command conceded that the defenders had initially "established contact with the British and Americans."

The general picture tonight in the south of Europe was this:

A series of five or more islands in the Aegean confronting Greece were firmly in Allied hands; Corsica on the western wing of the Allied offensive slowly rolling up from the south was substantially in Allied control; the whole of the Yugoslav coastline was ripening for Allied thrusts; and a base for Allied airpower capable of reaching into the Balkans on a grand scale was in process of development at Foggia, the greatest prize for the Italian offensive since the Salerno bridgehead was secured.

Wilson Named To Mediterrean Commission

Edwin C. Wilson, American Ambassador to Panama, was oppointed by President Roosevelt yesterday to be the representative of the United States on the Allied Mediterranean Commission.

British and Russian representatives already have been appointed to this commission, which will assemble and refer back to member governments all information about the Mediterranean situation with recommendations.

Wilson, 50 years old and a native of Palatka, Fla., is a career man in the diplomatic service, having served in important posts in South America and Europe.

He also has served as Minister to Uruguay and first secretary of the embassy at Paris. He was an American observer on the reparations and Rhineland evacuation commissions. He has been Ambassador to Panama since February, 1941.

FCC Approves Western Union, Postal Merger

The Federal Communications Commission yesterday approved merger of the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies in a move designed to give the Nation one vast telegraph system that can operate efficiently and economically.

FCC's action climaxed years of study by Congress and Government agencies. Both wire companies sought the merger after a long and hotly waged business battle.

The approval order, last step needed for the machinery to be merged, contemplates a two-year integration period for the far-flung holdings of each system to be shaken down to a money-making instead of a losing basis.

Baughman Heads Londonderry Base

Londonderry, Northern Ireland, Sept. 28 (AP).—Commodore Cortlandt Chesterfield Baughman, a native of West Newton, Pa., assumed command of the United States naval base at Londonderry today. He succeeds the late Commodore James A. Logan.

Baughman, a graduate of Annapolis in 1907 and also of the Naval War College, where he specialized in chemical warfare, came here from the Bureau of Naval Personnel in Washington, where he was director of special activities. He was captain of the yard at Pearl Harbor at the time of the Japanese attack.

Germans Continue Burning of Naples, Planting of Traps

With the American Fifth Army in Italy, Sept. 27 (Delayed) (AP).—Furious fires raging in Naples covered the entire city today with a huge pall of black smoke and the rumble of heavy explosions was clearly audible.

Naples itself appeared to be a dead city.

Light warships brush the coast daily. The port area was the scene of the main destruction. The docks were smashed. Those which escaped bombing now are being destroyed by German demolitions.

Two huge fires a short distance inside the city from the dock area have been raging unabated since Saturday, sending columns of smoke up thousands of feet. One apparently is at the main Naples electric plant.

Neapolitans who escaped from the city said recently German engineers were planting mines everywhere and booby traps in buildings and dwellings which still are habitable.

Deferment Asked for 1358, Ickes Says

Secretary Ickes, asserting his Interior Department is important to the war effort, yesterday accused Col. Edward A. Fitzpatrick, Selective Service official, and Robert M. Barnett, chairman of the Review Committee on Deferment of Government Employes, of "irresponsible, incompetent and malicious" testimony before a House Military subcommittee.

In a letter to Chairman Costello (Democrat) of California, the Interior Secretary said Fitzpatrick "exceeded any authority he could possibly have in his capacity as an Army officer, a representative of the Selective Service, or both."

Barnett, Ickes said, apparently succeeded in conveying the impression that the Interior Department had requested deferments for 6000 employes.

1358 Deferments Asked

The Secretary's letter said that his department had not asked 6000 deferments "nor does it intend to do so." He said the department had requested, as of September 15, 1943, a total of 1358 deferments.

Ickes said Fitzpatrick's "ignorance and incompetence" are most strikingly demonstrated by his selection of the map-making activities of the Geological Survey as his special target. The Secretary said this map-making is primarily a War Department project, financed by that agency as a "direct and important contribution" to the war.

Fitzpatrick and Barnett testified last Thursday before the committee, which has been investigating deferment of Government employes from military service.

Special Aide to Hershey

Colonel Fitzpatrick and Barnett last night declined comment on Ickes' statements.

Fitzpatrick is a special aide to Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service Director, having the title of "Specialist, Office of the Director." Fitzpatrick represents Selective Service on the preview committee headed by Barnett. He supervised the preparation of the two book-length reports issued by Selective Service thus far, "Selective Service in Peacetime" and "Selective Service in Wartime."

Jane Froman, Still In Casts, Sings at Show Rehearsal

New York, Sept. 28 (AP).—Jane Froman, leg and arm still in casts, was pushed onto the stage of a Broadway theater in a wheelchair today to resume a career almost ended with the crash of a Lisbon clipper last February.

The occasion was the beginning of rehearsals for a new show, "Artists and Models," in which the singing star will have the lead role. She'll sing her songs from the wheelchair. She said it might be 10 months before she could walk unaided.

"I've never felt more like singing," she declared. "The doctor advised it, sort of occupational therapy."

Chairman Cox said FCC Commissioner T. A. M. Craven would be among the first witnesses. It was understood that he will continue testimony on operations of the FCC's Radio Intelligence Division and the Foreign Broadcast Intelligence Service.

Liberties Group Protests

Meanwhile members of the House were presented with a memorial from the American Civil Liberties Union urging that Cox be replaced as chairman, or that funds for the committee's work be withdrawn.

"The inquiry so far conducted," the memorial said, "forces the conclusion that it was not designed to carry out the will of the House for a fair and impartial appraisal of the facts, but was directed to exploiting a case already prejudiced, in the interests of the personal grievances of the chairman and of powerful forces determined to discredit governmental regulation of radio."

Wheeler Demands Stay of Fathers for Probe of Manpower Hoarding, Dodging

men hold Government desk jobs.

"Where is the power of the Government that it lets these draft-dodgers and slackers hide in war plants and behind Government typewriters?" he demanded.

"Yet you say you have to draft fathers—you can't put it off until you investigate manpower and pull these slackers in."

One such sally brought a burst of applause from the galleries. Spectators were warned by the Chair that Senate rules forbade any demonstration, and there was no recurrence.

At one point Wheeler pointed to the galleries, saying: "There are a lot of babies up there. Take their fathers away from them, send their mothers off to work, and see what happens to the American home."

At another point he cried at his colleagues: "Shame on you! . . . You are going to take these fathers out of their homes and throw their children in the streets!"

Statements Challenged

Senate Majority Leader Alben Barkley and Majority Whip Lister Hill repeatedly took the floor to challenge Wheeler's statements.

Barkley accused Wheeler of being "unfair" to the great body of Government and industrial workers "in making these blanket charges."

"The Senator ought to name those he calls slackers," said Barkley. "Can he name a single man?" Wheeler said he could name one man drawing $10,000 annually while his wife also worked in the Government, but did not think it fair to name some and not others. He said it was not his duty, but the Government's, to investigate specific cases.

Barkley told Wheeler his letter writers should present their complaints to their local draft boards, "who have authority to deal with it."

Revised Figures Cited

Senator Hill disputed Wheeler's charges of excessive Government deferments. Hill presented revised figures by Selective Service certifying only 112,399 men in Government employ between 18 and 38 who have been deferred, insufficient to avert the fathers' draft if all were taken. Of that total, he said 96,658 were employed in War, Navy and other war agencies. Of the 15,741 exempted as essential men in regular agencies, Hill said Selective Service estimated only half could pass physical tests.

In his statement releasing his letter to McNutt, Senator Byrd, meanwhile, said he was convinced that "the best opportunity open to Government officials to conserve manpower lies in a thorough overhauling of the three million Civil Service employes."

Byrd wrote McNutt that as of April 15, 1943, there were 840,578 Government employes of draft age, one-half of the more than 1,600,000 men employes under Civil Service.

WMC Data Requested

Byrd asked McNutt to inform his Joint Economic Committee to what extent the WMC has investigated utilization of manpower, how many childless men are in Government employe, and how many of these men have been deferred and for what reason.

He pointed out that his committee, about to call War Department officials on projected personnel cuts, has set as its goal dismissal of 300,000 nonessential Government workers. He said he had recently received a letter from the Secretary of War saying that agency will shortly undertake to dismiss 150,000 workers.

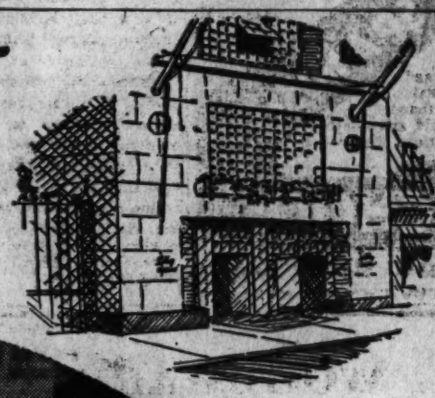
Lilly Daché



gives you her "Pick of the Post" on the newsstands today

FEW ARE THE WOMEN in America who do not know and admire Lilly Daché. In the realm of millinery, her name stands for all that the master arts of design and color imply.

Lilly Daché is vivacious, alive to every moment of her crowded day. Her horses—she's an ardent rider—are among her favorite hobbies, and her garden is her pride. She doesn't like lobster and detests flattery. Is a noted collector of pewter, old embroideries and books on fashion.

Lilly Daché is abreast of the times and a brilliant conversationalist on subjects of world importance. The evenings of her busy days are spent reading. Says Miss Daché:

"I try carefully to choose reading that is both entertaining and informative. That is the reason I prefer the new Saturday Evening Post.

"Its short stories provide a source of complete relaxation. They take me clear out of myself. And I enjoy the front row seat to things important which those splendid articles in the Post give me.

"I've had an opportunity to read in advance the issue of the Post that is on the newsstands today—and, as usual, it's all as fresh, as interesting and colorful as a new Easter bonnet."

Here's what Lilly Daché thinks about the contents of this great issue of the New Post

1. THE CANTANKEROUS CAGNEYS
by H. Allen Smith

"JIMMY CAGNEY has long been a favorite of mine. I've seen a great many of his pictures and now at last my Saturday Evening Post brings me the story of his life, his ups-and-downs in Hollywood. Of course, I'm charmed with Jimmy, Jeanne and the whole Cagney family, and the way they stick together is delightful. And when I think of Jimmy playing his first part as a faun, with a goat skin tied 'round his middle—well, I sha'n't spoil it for you. But it's a sparkling article, I assure you."

2. AMBULANCE CASE ON MOUNT REDOUBT
by Milo H. Fritz, M.D.

"UP ALASKA'S treacherous Mount Redoubt—through swamps knee-deep—across meadows where violets grow as large as roses. Up, ever up to snow-capped peaks and finally trudging painfully step by step to a half snow-buried plane. Here is one of the most thrilling true stories of self-sacrifice and sheer courage I've ever read, and once you start it you simply can't stop. A young Army doctor and his small rescue party push through where humans have never been before to bring back—alive—a comrade who crashed."

3. MET HIM ON MONDAY
by Frances Malm

"IF YOU ENJOY love stories . . . and who doesn't . . . I've just read one that sings of romance from beginning to end. I hope you'll read 'Met Him on Monday' because you'll love the lovable Rocky Ellis and the way he handles Peggy is something every man should learn. You know we women like men who have 'a way'. Here is a story that has all of the elements necessary for a whirlwind romance and a dashing—and happy—end."

Sinkings Force Nazis to Draft U-Boat Crews

The Navy's antisubmarine campaign has so chilled the fighting ardor of German sailors the Nazis now must draft crews to man their U-boats.

"We have information the Nazis already are being forced to draft the U-boat crews," Rear Admiral Francis S. Low said in an interview broadcast over the Blue Network. "Under such conditions, the quality of performance of officers and crews alike is bound to decrease to an unacceptable degree.

"We might compare the plight of the Nazi navy today with that which faced it during the final months of 1917."

He warned, however, the U-boat was far from being driven from the seas.

The admiral, assistant chief of naval staff, disclosed the existence of a new arm of the United States Navy in the Atlantic—the tenth fleet—organized and equipped for the specific purpose of killing U-boats.

The main elements of the fleet, Low said, are destroyer escorts (designed for the special job of convoy), escort carriers (the substandard size aircraft carriers) and Navy shore-based aircraft.

Low said production of the new destroyer escorts has been "excellent," adding that "our goal for the year is 200, and we shall get that many." Thirty-six of the vessels were completed last month alone, he said.

The Allies' position in the battle against submarine warfare in the North Atlantic is "the best yet," Low said.

"From May, 1943, through August, 1943," he asserted, "more than 4000 ships of the United Nations crossed the Atlantic safely in convoy. Of the total number so convoyed, less than one-half of 1 per cent were lost through U-boat action."

United Would Link D. C. With 7 More Midwest Cities

While another city—Phoenix, Ariz.—will be linked by direct air service with Washington, starting Friday, further extensions of existing schedules from the Capital to St. Louis and six other Midwestern cities is envisaged in applications filed by United Air Lines with the Civil Aeronautics Board yesterday.

Direct connection with Phoenix, over TWA's coast-to-coast trunk line, will be made "without the use of additional equipment," Denis Murray, district traffic manager, said.

United's application seeks authority to operate passenger-mail-express schedules on a new line branching off from the present transcontinental system at Cleveland and Toledo. The route would extend from the coterminals of Detroit and Cleveland through Toledo to Fort Wayne, Muncie, Anderson, Indianapolis, Terre Haute, St. Louis and Omaha.

Laundry Price Rollback to '42 Levels Forecast

A plan to roll back all laundry prices in the District to the level of March of 1942 was forecast yesterday by the local OPA, John L. Laskey, enforcement officer, announced.

Laskey, who has just returned from a vacation, said prior to his leaving he had received numerous complaints of higher prices being charged by laundries and had left instructions that officers investigate them before his return.

Informed that while he was on vacation the War Manpower Commission had granted laundry workers here a pay increase which established a 40 cent an hour minimum with time and a half for overtime and that in consequence the OPA was supposed to have under consideration a move to permit increased prices, Laskey said that would all have to be taken into consideration in any rollback plan.

How this could be effected Laskey was unable to say as he said he had not yet had sufficient time to make a study.

2 Former Air Wardens Get 30 Years as Spies

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 28.—Two former Staten Island air raid wardens who pleaded guilty to charges of conspiracy to violate the wartime espionage act were sentenced today to 30 years imprisonment each by Judge Mortimer W. Byers in Brooklyn Federal Court.

Judge Byers told the two men, Ernest F. Lehmitz, 57, and Erwin H. De Spretter, 52, he thought they had "not told the truth to the Government" and had "failed to cooperate with the Federal Bureau of Investigation" and consequently he was imposing the longest prison terms prescribed by law for such offenses.

Lehmitz and De Spretter at first pleaded innocent to the espionage conspiracy charges, but after the government completed its case against them they suddenly entered pleas of guilty.

Federal agents testified at the trial Lenmitz sent military information to Germany by means of invisible ink notes to persons in Spain and Partugal, and De Spretter sold to Lehmitz some of the information transmitted.

Persons convicted of violating the Wartime Espionage Act may be sentenced to death, but Judge Byers indicated he did not feel like imposing such sentences in view of testimony that their spy work had proven of little or no value to the enemy.

De Spretter, described by FBI agents as a consulting engineer specializing in heat radiation, made a personal plea to Judge Byers for leniency, saying:

"I have been 20 years in this country and raised a family here. I did not have it in my heart to hurt this country."

Arthur Gerfield Hays, counsel for Lehmitz, told the court his client was "weak, rather than malicious," and "one who submits easily to pressure." He said Lehmitz submitted to pressure by Germans to become a spy, and "just as readily told all when the FBI arrested him."

Joseph H. Wackerman, court-assigned counsel for De Spretter, described his client as a "20-cent spy."

Anti-Black-Market Campaign Opens

The community-wide home-front pledge campaign sponsored by the OPA to obtain cooperaton of housewives in wiping out black market purchasing was started Monday, according to Robert K. Thompson, District OPA administrator, who disclosed that black market transactions are flourishing in the Capital.

Pledges to refrain from black market buying are being distributed to housewives in theaters and other public places as well as through the schools. Approximately 100 metropolitan organizations will conduct metings through the month to discuss attacks on the black market and distribute pledges to be signed by members.

Announcement was also made yesterday by OPA General Manager Chester Bowles that arrangements are under way for administering coal rationing in the event the Solid Fuel Administration finds it necessary and the WPB authorizes it.

September 30 is U. S. Sacrifice Day

So is every day till we win the war. But the extra sacrifices you are asked to make are all to your advantage. You are not asked to give—you are asked to lend—lend every dime and dollar you can possibly spare, not just what you cannot spend. You are challenged to be as good a soldier as the marines who combat, at the same time, the fetid jungle and Japanese treachery—as the soldiers who see their comrades dying, as they challenge the death-struggle desperation of once-invincible German tanks—as the sailors who defy black angel enemy planes or the death-cargoed submarine pack.

They are the men you know—the boys who went to school with you—your brothers—your sons—perhaps your sweetheart or your husband is one of them. Are you able to tell them, in your letters, that you are in there fighting with them—making courageous sacrifices, too—or can you report only a safe investment of an easily spared 10%? Ask them if 10% is enough. Or decide for yourself.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

(This is the fourth of Drew Pearson's columns on the State Department, the Government agency now most in the spotlight of the Nation.)

JOHN HUBNER, the young diplomat who saved the Queen Mary with around 10,000 American troops on board, has just resigned. His resignation illustrates one of the fundamental problems in keeping an alert American diplomatic service—marriage to foreign women.

In this case Hubner is marrying the niece of the Archbishop of Sao Paulo in Brazil. To do so the State Department has told him he must resign.

This means the loss of a man with many years experience, also one who proved himself especially quick-witted in a major emergency.

More than a year ago, the Nazi radio announced that the Queen Mary, crammed with United States troops, was sunk off Brazil. From the War Department came complete silence. In order not to play into Nazi hands, no word of explanation was given as to what actually had happened to the Queen Mary. There was a good reason for this. Here is what happened.

Plot Against Queen Mary

UP IN SAO PAULO, central state of Brazil, the State Department's John Hubner had discovered that a large radio transmitter had been imported by the German firm of Siemens & Co., and was being held for delivery to a purchaser. The address of that purchaser was phony and probably the name also.

So Hubner had the efficient Brazilian police watch the Siemens store night and day to see who might take delivery of the radio transmitter. No one came. Finally, one evening at 6:45, just before the store closed, a German picked up the radio transmitter. He was immediately arrested, subjected to stiff cross-examination, and after many hours finally broke down. He disclosed the names of his confederates, together with the location of a Nazi radio station in the hills above Rio de Janeiro.

Hubner, working with the cooperative Brazilian police, immediately rounded up the gang, and flew to Rio where the radio station was seized—just as it was sending out a message to Nazi subs regarding the sailing of the Queen Mary.

It had been a perfect Nazi trap. The Queen Mary had put in at Rio for fuel and supplies. She was too big to hide. Nazi agents in Rio learned her sailing time, and flashed this to lurking U-boats.

So sure was Berlin of this setup that it actually announced the sinking of the Queen Mary to the world.

What the Nazis did not know was that Hubner and the Brazilian police had seized their radio station, and that the course of the Queen Mary immediately was changed.

Last month Hubner asked the State Department for permission to marry a Brazilian girl. His request was refused. He resigned.

Too Many Foreign Wives

SEVERAL years ago Bill Bullitt, then Ambassador to Moscow, sat down to dinner in his embassy. Around the table were his staff with their wives, supposed to mingle and make friends with the Russians. They included:

(1) Counselor John C. Wiley, whose wife is Polish and hates the Russians; (2) First Secretary Loy Henderson; whose wife is Latvian and hates the Russians; (3) Third Secretary George Kennan, whose wife is Norwegian and hates the Russians; and (4) Attache Angus Ward, whose wife is Finnish and hates the Russians.

After dinner, Bullitt got up and cabled the President that American diplomats should not be permitted to marry other than American wives. In this, he was 95 per cent right. For years American diplomacy has been warped and weakened by the fact that U. S. diplomats married foreign wives.

Today, for instance, Ambassador Norman Armour, one of the ablest and most fair-minded of U. S. envoys, probably is barred as Undersecretary of State because he married a White Russian, Princes Myra Koudacheff. Actually, this would never affect Armour in his relations with Russia, but in the last three weeks, ever since the publicity given to Russian policies, the State Department is bending over backward to avoid any appearance of being anti-Russian.

On the other side of the picture, however, young U. S. diplomats are not given enough time in their own country to get acquainted with American girls. They can't make love, propose, and persuade their fiances to desert their parents for an unknown foreign country, all in a three-week visit. And they don't get home more than once every four years—unless they are among the wealthy inside the State Department who can afford it.

Therefore, one fundamental need in American diplomacy is to let young diplomats come home every so often for a period of a year, during which they not only can mix with the American youth of their own age, but also can get out in the Middle West, which really dominates the foreign policy of the United States, and see what the people are talking and thinking about. (Until a few years ago every top executive in the State Department was picked from east of the Allegheny Mountains.)

Also the marriage ban might be relaxed somewhat, especially regarding wives from Pan-American countries where the Good Neighbor policy is important, and where marital union with a leading family may actually help a U. S. diplomat.

Hull vs. Lehman

MEANWHILE, the question of personnel, which actually is the root problem inside the State Department, has bobbed up in another revealing manner. Secretary Hull has refused to permit ex-Governor Lehman of New York to appoint the personnel he wants for his Foreign Relief Administration. Specifically he has banned Morris Rosenthal, prominent New York import-export man, a chief executive of the old Board of Economic Warfare.

Governor Lehman, rated as one of the best executives New York ever had, feels that he knows how to pick men, perhaps knows more about personnel than Secretary Hull. Also he feels that as long as he keeps in line with State Department policy, the details of managing his office should be left to him.

At this writing, however, Hull continues adamant against Rosenthal's appointment. Rosenthal, recognized by Washington as a top-notch executive, was friendly to Vice President Wallace, who refused recently to let Hull censor his speech on post-war peace made in Chicago.

Refuge for Dogs To Be Enlarged

Prince Georges County administrative authorities yesterday allotted $200 for the enlargement of the dog refuge recently established near Hyattsville, Md., in conjunction with the current quarantine on dogs in the county.

The allotment was made at the request of John M. Walton, president of the Prince Georges County Animal Rescue League, who pointed out that the present kennels would care for only 26 dogs a day. The additional funds will permit the Rescue League to add another 20 cages for the impounded animals, it was said.

THE RIGHT ANSWERS:

Three cheers for the public service now being rendered by the Washington Board of Trade's Greater National Capital Committee which recently took over responsibility for the Information Department located in the Office of U. S. Information at Pennsylvania Avenue, N. W., between 14th and 15th Streets. Here you can now find out the What, Where, When, Why and How of Washington.

And here, too, you can now find out the correct, up-to-the-minute answers on routes and schedules of Capital Transit's Buses and Street Cars. We are supplementing the work of that Committee by placing an Information Clerk on downtown duty between 9:30 A.M. and 6:30 P.M., weekdays. That representative has a direct wire to our main office to insure accuracy and speed in answers.

Capital Transit's Main Information Department at 36th and M Streets, N. W., answers hundreds of questions about routes or service daily—even the $64 ones—because in time of war there are inevitable uncertainties even to native Washingtonians, not to mention many newcomers. Fifteen especially trained clerks are on duty from 7 A.M. to midnight everyday. We are always glad to answer questions concerning Street Car and Bus Service. Just call MIchigan 6363, Extension 572, or, if you are downtown, drop in and see us at the Office of U. S. Information.

Argentine Socialists Ask Hemisphere Unity

Montevideo, Uruguay, Sept. 28 (AP).—The Socialist Party, one of the three main political bodies in Argentina, has sent a memorandum to President Pedro Ramirez demanding democratic action by the government, including full-fledged inter-American solidarity, a quick return to constitutional normality, and restoration of freedom of the press.

This was disclosed today when copies of the memorandum, submitted to the President last week by the party's national committee, reached Montevideo.

Farm Parity Vote Seen as Both Curb and Another Subsidy

By Francis M. Le May

Associated Press Staff Writer

A bill to put a 100 per cent of parity floor under basic farm commodities received approval of the House Agricultural Committee yesterday, and precipitated an immediate debate on whether this would curb or intensify the Government's food subsidy program.

Chairman Fulmer (Democrat) of South Carolina said the full parity price support would erase the need for subsidy payments, while Representaive Hope (Republican) of Kansas described the bill as "another form of subsidy."

"I see no need for the bill," said Hope, ranking Republican member of the Agricultural Committee. "All basic commodities now are selling at parity or virtually at parity, except wheat, and if the Government would allow a slight rise in the price of flour, this would bring wheat to parity."

Under the bill, the Government would guarantee a farmer "parity prices" for his produce. Parity is a price calculated to give a farm product the same purchasing power, in terms of things the farmer buys, that it had in a previous base period, usually 1909-14.

Some consumer retail prices are based now on below-parity prices at the farm level. The Administration contends Government benefit payments make up the difference to the farmer, but the congressional farm bloc has argued against considering these payments when price ceilings are fixed.

The parity bill would raise to 100 per cent, the Government loan support on basic commodities which now ranges from 85 to 90 per cent of parity. These commodities include wheat, corn, cotton, tobacco and rice.

The committee voted also to go before the House Banking Committee to request similar support treatment for all war essential production, such as vegetables, cheese, butter, citrus fruits and crops producing fats and oils.

One member of the latter committee said that if the 100 per cent parity bill passed, without attendant action revising the powers of the Commodity Credit Corporation, then the corporation could buy a wider range of commodities and sell them at a loss—which would amount to subsidy.

Dodge Heiress' Will Bars Ex-Husband

Stamford, Conn., Sept. 28 (AP).—Mrs. Delphine Dodge Goode, heiress to automobile millions, stipulated in her will, filed for probate here yesterday, that no part in the administration of trusts created by the document was to be given to her former husband, James H. R. Cromwell, former Minister to Canada and now husband of Doris Duke

Mrs. Godde, who had occupied a 50-acre farm near here with her husband, Timothy H. Godde, for the past few years, died in Stamford June 18 at the age of 44.

There is no Shortage on FRIENDSHIP

And in a way, that's a bit embarrassing. For these days the many good friends of Mount Vernon are asking for more and more of this mild and mellow rye, with the smooth, matchless flavor. Yet the only supplies available come from stocks laid by before the war began* that grow smaller every day. Naturally, dealers' shelves are soon swept clean under these conditions. So to be sure of getting Mount Vernon, it is best to ask for it frequently to make certain you get some from his next shipment.

Stettinius' Appointment Sent to Senate

President Roosevelt yesterday submitted to the Senate for confirmation the nomination of Edward R. Stettinius, jr., to be Undersecretary of State.

The Chief Executive announced Saturday night his acceptance of the resignation of Sumner Welles as Undersecretary, and the appointment of Stettinius to succeed him.

The President also transmitted to the Senate the nomination of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower for promotion from his permanent rank of lieutenant colonel of infantry to major general. Eisenhower, supreme Allied commander in the Mediterranean theater, now holds temporary rank as a full general, with Senate confirmation.

Generals Advanced

Three major generals were nominated to the temporary rank of lieutenant general. They are Hugh A. Drum, commanding the Eastern Defense Command; Ira C. Eaker, commanding the Eighth Air Force based in England, and Barton K. Yount.

Twenty-three brigadier generals were nominated as major generals and 45 colonels were nominated brigadier generals, all to hold the higher ranks temporarily. The permanent rank of most of these officers is that of lieutenant colonel or colonel.

Gen. McCoach Promoted

Among the promotions was that of Brig. Gen. David McCoach, who in 1938 was named Engineer Commissioner of the District, a post which he held until May 16, 1941, when he was transferred to the Office of Chief Engineers in Washington.

In May of this year he was assigned to duty with Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes, who had been given the task of handling the Nation's difficult coal strike situation.

Lieutenant General Drum, whose usual home address was listed as Indianapolis, Ind., holds the rank of lieutenant general by virtue of his appointment as commander of the First Army. He is being nominated for the rank on a temporary basis in order that he might hold it in his new job as chairman of the Inter-American Defense Board.

Major General Eaker's usual home address was listed as Eden, Tex., and the home address of Major General Yount, commander of the Army Air Forces Training Command, was listed as Troy, Ohio.

Army Officers Stepped Up

Harry J. Collins, Douglass T. Greene, Gay E. Porter, William E. Lynd, Frederick H. Osborn, George W. Griner, David McCoach, jr., Stephen J. Chamberlin, Robert W. Grow, Shelley U. Marietta, John A. Crane, Joseph N. Dalton, George F. Lull, Leonard F. Wing, Stanley E. Reinhart, Albert W. Kenner, Lloyd E. Jones, Charles P. Stivers, David N. W. Grant, Robert L. Spraggins, James L. Frink, Gobert H. Mills, Robert LeG. Walsh.

The following colonels were nominated to be brigadier generals (temporary), Army of the United States:

Thomas F. Hickey, Stuart Cutler, Eric S. Molitor, Edward Barber, Paul E. Burrows, Hubert W. Beyette, Charles M. Antcorn, Laurence C. Craigie, Victor V. Taylor, Merrick G. Estrabrook, jr., John H. Hinds, John S. Winn, jr., Thomas F. Bresnahan, Dale V. Gaffney, Curtis E. LeMay, Emer Yeager, Edward Montgomery, Morris Berman, William R. Nicholas, Edward J. Timberlake, jr., Harold R. War Apathy Invites Peril, Churchill Says

By E. C. Daniel
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 28.—Prime Minister Churchill told Britain today that the Nation's present full war effort must be maintained without let-up, through two more years if necessary, and he warned that apathy or a slackening of the pace of the British war machine would bring new dangers, "deadly in their character."

Churchill said that larger armies would be fighting and more powerful air forces would be striking at the heart of the enemy during the forthcoming year, and to this prophecy Labor Minister Ernest Bevin added that "it will be a tough go during this winter and early spring."

Appeal Made to Women

The Prime Minister and the Labor Minister and four other British war leaders addressed the nation through 6000 representative British women assembled secretly in London's giant Albert Hall.

The government took the extraordinary measure of inviting to London the thousands of women who kept their secret for two weeks, paying their expenses and reimbursing those who lost time from work. A similar meeting was held several months ago for miners, to whom Churchill appealed for a higher output of fuel.

"We cannot reveal to you all that lies in store during that period," said Bevin of the coming year, "but it does represent possibly the greatest task that Britain has ever had to face."

Looking forward to the American-British-Russian Tripartite Conference of Foreign Ministers, Eden advocated proceeding "by practice rather than by blue print" in plans for a future world order.

In welcoming the forthcoming conference, Eden said:

"I hope that one task for that meeting will be to examine and to decide upon methods for joint consultation and joint action between us all in peace as well as in war."

Churchill was blunt in his warning of the dangers of letting up at this crucial point on the march to victory.

"Although you cannot say that the peril is as imminent as it was in 1940 or during that year when we were all alone, nevertheless if this war were so handled that the unity of the National effort were diminished, then indeed another set of dangers not perhaps so catastrophic in their aspects but nonetheless deadly in their character would march upon us," he said.

"War Would Languish"

"The war would languish, our soldiers would find themselves short of munitions and services just at the time when they would need them most, just at the time when their action is growing to an ever larger scale—all this would occur."

And this, he said, is just the enemy's hope, that the democracies will get weary and that the Axis will be able to consolidate its position and "open upon the world in, it may be, a decade, another war even more terrible than that through which we are passing."

"We are fully extended now," said Churchill of the nation's war effort, "and what we have to do is to hold it."

Father Accused In Baby's Death

Los Angeles, Sept. 28 (AP).—A middle-aged, baldish father, still shaken from what witnesses described as a week-end he spent in intoxication, sat with bowed head today and heard a coroner's jury accuse him of hurling his 16-month-old son, Johnny, to death from a 10th floor hotel window.

Det. Lieut. R. B. McCreadie testified both in a room, occupied by Claude Dexter, his wife, Eve, and the child, were unmussed when he examined them after the tragedy. McCreadie quoted Dexter as having told him his last remembrance was of lying on the bed with the baby; that he fell asleep and recalled nothing more until his wife awakened him and said the child was dead.

Senate Confirms Gatch For High Navy Post

By the Associated Press

Rear Admiral Thomas L. Gatch, a hero of the Battle of Gaudalcanal, was confirmed by the Senate yesterday for a four-year term as judge advocate general of the Navy.

Gatch commanded the famous "Battleship X," whose antiaircraft guns knocked down 32 Japanese planes in a single engagement at Guadalcanal. In subsequent action Gatch's ship was credited with sinking a Japanese battleship or heavy cruiser and other enemy war vessels.

Helvering Confirmed For Bench in Kansas

The Senate confirmed yesterday the nomination of Guy T. Helvering, former commissioner of internal revenue, as judge for the District of Kansas.

The confirmation was voted unanimously at the request of Senator Reed (Republican) of Kansas, while Senator Capper (Republican) of Kansas, paid a brief tribute to the nominee.

Julia says—

Here's how with fall vegetables

I FOUND, long ago, that fall vegetables can really be both good and different! Take parsnips and rutabagas, for instances. If your family hasn't been too keen about them before, they might like them this way. I know my family does, and they're inclined to turn up their noses at them served in any other way. Here are some suggestions for those two fall vegetables, and others, too:

CANDIED PARSNIPS — Wash and scrape or peel parsnips, and cook whole or cut in halves lengthwise. Cook covered in small amount of salted water, about 30 minutes or until tender. Drain, sprinkle with brown sugar, salt and pepper and bake in moderate oven about 15 minutes, basting parsnips once or twice with hot water and meat drippings. Serve as you would sweet potatoes.

SPICED RUTABAGAS — (This goes for turnips, too.) Wash and slice rutabagas, and cook covered until tender in just enough hot, salted water to create a steam, about 15 minutes. Drain and mash and season with salt, pepper and a little ground cinamon and cloves if you like.

CAULIFLOWER SALAD—Wash cauliflower and separate into tiny flowerlets or chop coarsely. Add raisins, chopped apple, chopped nut meats and marinate in a tart light dressing. Serve on a bed of shredded spinach. This really tastes better than it sounds!

STUFFED SQUASH—Use small individual squashes like Danish. Split squash, remove seeds and parboil in salted water until almost tender. Drain and fill cavities with chopped, cooked meat and tomato mixture. Bake in hot oven (400° F.) for about 30 minutes or until squash is thoroughly tender and meat mixture is heated through.

creases for November. "The overall meat supply picture is expected to improve in October," OPA said, "but civilians will benefit little, as most of the anticipated increase in output will be absorbed by heavier Government requirements."

Both lend-lease and military agencies are taking advantage of the autumn slaughtering, it was pointed out, to build up their reserves. Both lowered their takes considerably during the summer months, when beef and pork were particularly scarce.

The following pork cuts will go up two points: center chops, loin-center cuts, and spareribs (raw or barbecued). Advancing one point will be: tenderloin steaks and chops, boneless loin cuts, loin roasts, shoulder butts, and Canadian bacon.

Eighteen "variety meats" were removed from rationing altogether, and can be purchased point free wherever the customer can find them. They will be: pigs' feet of all varieties; beef, veal, and pork kidneys; ox joints; long cut beef tongues; beef, veal, and pork brains; chitterlings; pork ears, tails, and snouts.

Following the trend for diary products generally, all rationed cheese will go up one point per pound.

Many of the "variety meats" are used only by industrial producers of meat products such as sausage,

Potato Ceilings Extended by OPA

The Office of Price Administration yesterday extended its program of price ceilings on potatoes to cover the late 1943 crop. Because of abundant yields, OPA said this will have the effect of bringing consumer prices "substantially" below expected retail ceilings of 4.5 cents a pound in October and 5.5 cents in June, 1944.

The swing upward to 5.5 cents, OPA said, is to take care of storage charges between October and June, as otherwise retail ceilings will be determined by the usual markup over cost.

OPA said, and their removal from the chart will simplify ration problems for these concerns.

The poultry price order gives housewives a 3¼-cent reduction in the ceiling price of "quick-frozen eviscerated" poultry, the regular packeged type sold by frozen-foods dealers. The poultry charges are passed on to consumers by the fixed-markup provision of the retail grocery regulations. Kosher poultry prices remain unchanged.

A decrease of 2 cents a pound for processors of quick-frozen eviscerated birds is provided, together with the requirement that each bird sold be in the original package in which it was packed at the time of evisceration stamped with the weight of the bird before freezing.

Hard-scalded poultry, which formerly sold at grade A prices, is brought down ½ cent a pound through a requirement that all such poultry other than ducks and geese be classed as grade B and grade C. Poultry which has been subjected to water hotter than 135 degrees Fahrenheit for dressing is classed as "hard-scalded."

nounced sometime today by the Federal Reserve Bank at Richmond.

Granville Gude, chairman of the "Liberator Club" recently formed here with the aim of recruiting 350 purchasers of $1000 series E bonds to raise the $350,000 cost of an Army B-24 (Liberator) bomber, announced the following new members:

Theodore W. Noyes, Lewis T. Leonard, Miss Agnes Saul, Miss Helen Castle, Henry W. Kearney, Mrs. Flora M. Welker, J. E. Inman, Carl J. Nyman, Mrs. Frank Weinstein, Edward D. Yonker, Miss Elizabeth Ann Yonker, Mrs. Elizabeth K. Yonker, James F. Sebold, Charles H. Croff, Mrs. M. Adelaide Wilson, Mrs. Rose Katz, Miss Phyllis Herrmann, and Z. D. Blackistone.

Other developments:

1. Retail stores reported progress in reaching the goal of $200 set for each employe. Julius Garfiinckel & Co. announced sales had passed $90,000 and Morton's reported that it had reached $16,000 with a goal of $20,000.

2. Mrs. Carlton C. Duffus, war bond leader of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, reported that more than $250,000 in bonds had been sold. Original quota was $110,000.

3. Frank Murray, Workmen's Circle bond chairman, announced the club had sold $665,000 of the $70,000 goal.

4. Rallies were held by employes of the Darby Printing Co., and of Goldenberg's department store.

5. A bond rally will follow Rosh Hashana services at the Beth Sholem Synagogue tomorrow. The congregation has reached $100,000 of its $250,000 goal.

6. Bond sales during Free Movies Day Monday totaled $65,905 in 34 out of the 38 theaters participating. This represents 1625 individual sales.

forward of the conning tower. The raider was mortally wounded, but the German crew raced to the guns and began firing upon the planes.

Williams had used his bomb load. He called his carrier and other planes were sent out to finish the job.

Meantime Steiger continued strafing the U-boat. On his third attack, his Wildcat fighter suddenly swerved, its nose dropped and it plunged into the water 100 feet from the U-boat. Steiger is listed as missing in action.

Then aid came from the carrier. Lieut. Comdr. Charles W. Brewer, 32, Tulsa, Okla., carried on the strafing and was followed by Lieut. (j.g.) James F. Schoby, 23, of Rode, Iowa, in a bomber, who finished the job of sinking the submarine.

Approximately 35 survivors of the U-boat were seen struggling in the water and a destroyer rescued 33. One died a few minutes later. The others, treated by Lieut. Rodney A. Farmer, 27, Greensburg, Pa., are prisoners.

The next morning Williams, again on patrol, spotted a periscope cutting through the water about 8 miles away. He sped to the attack and droped one bomb in close. The U-boat disappeared, traling oil. This attack was listed as involving only "possible damage."

Two days later Williams made his third attack, this one a certain kill. One bomb exploded directly beneath the German submarine. Five men were thrown clear and debris and oil spread over the sea. Two of the Germans drowned before a destroyer reached the scene. The other three are held prisoner.

A series of routine patrols followed until Williams' radioman Grinstead spotted the next U-boat.

Williams dropped his bombs. The sub surfaced sharply. Black smoke trailed from its conning tower and it began to settle. Approximately 30 survivors were rescued by a destroyer that reached the scene.

Lieut. (j. g.) Martin G. O'Neill, 26, Jersey City, N. J., and Lieut. Comdr. Brewer and Lieut. Richard F. Neely, 29, Tuscaloosa, Ala., aided Williams in that attack.

Williams was born in Pierre, S. Dak., and was attached to the USS Lexington when that carrier was sunk in the Pacific. At the time she went down he was in the air and landed his plane on another carrier.

Explosion Rocks Lisbon Fortress

Lisbon, Portugal, Sept. 28 (AP).—A munitions explosion today blew up one bastion of the old Fortress of Ameizoeira, rocking every building in Lisbon and sending the populace into the streets. Five men were believed missing.

Premier Dr. Antonio de Oliveira Salazar inspected the fortress soon after the explosion. No announcement was made on the cause of the blast.

Kremenchug, below Kiev, pinning Axis remnants to the east bank. A frontal assault force was nine miles from the city.

Russian armies drawn up on the east bank opposite Kiev also consolidated their positions, said the bulletin, recorded by the Soviet monitor.

Berlin broadcasts still said the Russians were filtering across to the west bank near Kiev, and Capt. Ludwig Sertorious, Nazi military commentator, frankly recognized the peril to the German line in the north.

In what appeared to be a preparation for another German retreat, west of the Dnieper, Sertorius said the Russian flanking design was becoming clearer in the north, then added:

"German armies will be established on a new front which has outstanding advantages for the defenders."

On the western tip of the Taman Peninsula in the Caucasus, the Germans apparently were in headlong retreat across the Kerch Strait into the Crimea.

The communique said airmen of the Soviet Black Sea fleet had struck blows on concentrations of German troops there and "on enemy means of transport in the Strait of Kerch." Two freight craft and several landing barges were declared sunk, 100 trucks destroyed, 10 German planes shot down and a battalion of troops wiped out.

Moscow dispatches said long lines of German reserves were being hurried from the rear in an effort to hold the Dnieper line.

President Fails to Announce Marshall Appointment

Marshall and Secretary of War Stimson that there is absolutely no basis for such charges.

The President was asked at his press conference about published reports that Marshall was to have a new command. He said he had expected such a question and would answer by quoting from the newspapers, adding that he wanted it recorded in his press conference minutes so that it could be published later.

Then he read a story by William K. Hutchinson, chief of the Washington Bureau of the International News Service, emphasizing that it was written by a press association executive.

The article charged that Marshall was to be "kicked upstairs" in a "domestic coup d'etat" under a plan devised by "influential White House advisers" to put Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, commander of Army Service Forces, in Marshall's place.

"Informed sources" were quoted as saying the motive was to give Somervell control of the huge Army production program "as a political weapon in the 1944 presidential campaign."

Mr. Roosevelt then read from two editorials in the New York Herald Tribune which spoke of the "mixture of unauthenticated 'news,' rumor, guesswork and innuendo" written in similar stories as a "brilliant example, first, of how to obstruct the conduct of the war, and second, of the vices of that whispering-gallery journalism into which we seem to be sinking."

The President made no direct comment on the articles, but he in effect indorsed the Herald-Tribune editorial and rebuked the writers of stories charging political interference with the War Department.

A reporter then asked if General Marshall was to be given the reported new post. The President replied he had nothing to say and obviously could not. What should control the time such news is given out? the President asked, and then added that obviously press reports should not be determining.

His statement that there is no news on a subject, the President continued, does not mean that a subject is not being discussed. It means only there is no news at this time. Actually a subject may be in the discussion stage and there may be an announcement on it in a week, two months or ten months later.

He was asked if there had not been "leaks in prominent places" about Marshall's transfer, and agreed emphatically. Questioned whether anything could be done about it, he said there wasn't, that about 90 per cent of the higher ups in Washington, who do not leak, are damn good eggs. The other 10 per cent, whom he said he would not characterize, leak badly.

Earlier in the day, members of the House Military Affairs Committee took the floor to protest, in Marshall's name, against the charges of political tampering in the Army.

Representative Thomason (Democrat) of Texas said that General Marshall had called him at his home yesterday morning to "express very deep regret and deep concern" at the charges, saying that they were seriously affecting the war effort.

Chairman May of the committee declared that Marshall assured him yesterday that there is "complete harmony among the high officials of the War Department and the Administration, and that anything that was done was done with his approval."

The ranking Republican on the Military Committee took the floor to state that he also had conferred with General Marshall and that the latter "greatly resents all references that have been made to his key man, General Somervell, on the floor of this House and in the newspapers."

Before they spoke, Representative Shafer (Republican) of Michigan repeated his earlier charges that a plot had ben hatched to convert the War Department into a political machine — substantially the same allegions made in the INS story.

Majority Leader McCormack joined in the debate, giving the House a statement from Secretary Stimson saying the President Roosevelt "has absolutely refrained from interfering in any way with choice of any generals of the the War Department, and in the United States Army and in their assignment to duty," has followed the advice of his military advisers "in the consideration of all questions of strategy which have governed the war" and that "so far as his intrusion in any political or personal way it has been absolutely nonexistent."

Stimson is a Republican.

No Shots Fired As British Took Foggia

By Daniel De Luce
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the Eighth Army in Italy, Sept. 27 (Delayed).—British armor rolled into the bomb-smashed heart of Foggia today and found that the last German defenders had abandoned the city last night.

As tanks and armored cars of the Eighth Army cruised gingerly past block after block of deserted ruins they finally encountered a lone civilian—a bearded man in tattered, faded blue jeans.

"Hello, boys," said Pietro Romania, who used to live in New York. "Make yourself at home."

The British took Foggia without firing a shot, acquiring the most important air base that the Allies had yet won in Italy. They smothered small but bitter German opposition yesterday within 5 miles of Foggia.

The Germans destroyed a series of railroad and highway bridges over the Cervaro River, but despite last night's rain, it was still only a shallow, muddy creek and easily fordable at almost any point of its bed across the Foggia plain to its mouth in the Adriatic.

A large amount of relatively undamaged railway rolling stock, including 20 to 30 locomotives, was left by the Germans on sidings outside Foggia. Scores of heavy bombs, motor vehicles, many cases of ammunition and boxes of plane parts were found in nearby woods.

Foggia's main airfield is littered with wreckage.

RAF officers riding in armored cars reached the airfields shortly after Foggia was occupied, and tonight they were completing a survey of the work that will be necessary to make them a great springboard for jumping the limits of the Allied air offensive far northward.

Foggia, a modern industrial center in southeastern Italy, is a broken, twisted shambles from prolonged air attacks which were made during the summer and in which Flying Fortresses and Liberators participated.

Streets Deeply Pitted

Its entire population had taken refuge in the countryside, but this afternoon perhaps a dozen women and children and several men came back to scratch in the wreckage.

Virtually every street is pitted with deep craters. Half of the big power station is smashed flat.

Ultramodern six-story apartment houses were split by direct bomb hits. Masses of rubble mark what had been shops and office buildings.

A few scattered mines were planted by the Germans around Foggia. Otherwise the enemy had been unable to capitalize on what had been a favorite method of static defense. One booby trap killed an Italian boy this afternoon as he was fingering through remnants of a German camp for loot.

Envoy Pleads For Successful War Fund Drive

A plea to make the forthcoming Community War Fund drive a success, was voiced yesterday by Alex W. Loudon, Netherlands Ambassador, in a talk before members of the advanced gifts division at a meeting at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce yesterday.

The division is preparing to open a campaign for $500,000 as its quota of the $4,800,000 sought in the Washington area.

Other speakers included Herbert L. Willett, jr., executive director of the Community War Fund; Abbot P. Mills, advance gifts chairman, and George Barrett of the campaign staff. First reports will be made at another luncheon meeting Tuesday at 12:30 p. m. in the Hall of Flags, U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

D. C. Officer Reported Killed, Another Held Prisoner; 3 Other Men in Service Missing

Lieut. William J. Suit, who, the War Department announced as missing in action yesterday along with four other local servicemen, has been killed, his parents were notified recently. Reported missing but according to word received early this month a prisoner in Italian hands is Staff Sergt. Robert K. Binnix. Missing in action are Lieut. Philip A. Sager, jr., Flight Officer Robert J. Coffman and Pvt. Walter E. Hitchens, jr.

SUIT

Lieutenant Suit, 24, son of Second Batalion Fire Chief Joseph E. Suit, 1310 Farragut st. nw., was first pilot on a Flying Fortress. Word of his death reported by the German government through the International Red Cross was received Monday. A native of Washington, Lieutenant Suit was graduated from Central High School and the University of Maryland. A member of the ROTC, he was commissioned a lieutenant in the Infantry upon his graduation in 1941. He entered the Air Corps in May, 1942, and was trained at Maxwell Field. His parents have been notified by the War Department that he is to be awarded the Air Medal.

Staff Sergt. Robert K. Binnix was born in Washington and is a graduate of Eastern High School. A member of the District National Guard, he entered the Army in February, 1941. The following year he became a paratrooper. Since early this month when he was reported in Italian hands. His wife, Mrs. Eunice K. Binnix, Route 1, Parker ave., Hyattsville, has received no word of his whereabouts. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Irving W. Binnix, live at 8341 Colesville rd., Silver Spring.

BIMIX

Missing in action while stationed in North Africa, 24-year-old Lieut. Philip A. Sager, jr., recently wrote to his wife, Mrs. Dorothy L. Sager, 813 Tewkesbury pl. nw., that he had completed over 170 combat hours, and would soon be home on leave. The pilot of a Lightning P-38, he received his wings at Luke Field, Ariz., and received special training in desert warfare at Muroc, Calif. Born in Woodstock, Va., where he attended school he had lived in the District for five years. Before entering the Air Corps he was employed by the Washington Gas Light Co.

SAGER

Flight Officer Robert J. Coffman, 23, former District manager for The Post, yesterday was announced as missing on September 12 by the War Department. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Julius D. Coffman, 303 Philadelphia ave., Takoma Park, Md., he was graduated from Central High School and attended Columbia Tech. He enlisted in the Canadian Air Corps, September 1, 1941, and was transferred to the United States Army Air Forces in March, 1943, while stationed in England.

Pvt. Walter E. Hitchens, jr. announced as missing in action while stationed in North Africa, is the son of Mrs. Walter E. Hitchens, 3033 Dent pl. nw.

Medical Group To Give Field Set For Use in Navy

The medical and surgical relief committee will present equipment to set up a battle dressing station on the USS Boston to Rear Admiral Luther Sheldon, jr., USN, MC, at the annual meeting of the Medical Society tomorrow at 2 p. m. at the Hotel Mayflower.

The gift, consisting of an emergency medical field set, an operating kit and supplemental instruments, valued at $385, will be presented by Mrs. Fred Sanderson, president of the Women's Auxiliary to the District Medical Society. Admiral Sheldon will accept the donation in the name of Secretary Frank Knox.

According to Mrs. Huttleston Rogers, founder and chairman of the committee, over $568,000 worth of medical and surgical supplies have gone to maritime and military units of America and her allies.

Buck Introduces Bill to Recall All Puzzling Pennies

His patience exhausted by the new 1-cent coins, too easily confused with dimes, Senator C. Douglass Buck (Republican) of Delaware decided yesterday to try to put a quick end to the "bad pennies" which he said have the Nation short-changing itself.

He introduced a bill providing for the recall from circulation of every 1-cent coined since December 23, 1942, when the zinc and steel pennies went into production. Senator Buck also ordered that future pennies bear no resemblance to any other coin in "color, dimensions, shape or design."

He introduced the bill purely from personal vexation, due to such embarrassing moments as "leaving a penny tip instead of a dime."

Court Dissolves Fears' Marriage

Los Angeles, Sept. 28 (AP).—The marriage of Ralph Gordon Fear, former wealthy Culver City, Calif., camera manufacturer, and Arline Fear, his one-time secretary, was annulled today by Judge Henry N. Willis. Fear, 54, was mentally ill, it was ruled.

Mrs. Fear, 25, had testified that prior to their marriage she shared Fear's affections with his first wife, Grace. Fear told his first wife, she asserted, that he and Arline had been married in a Greek incarnation 2300 years ago.

Puerto Rican Self-Rule Asked by President

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt submitted to Congress yesterday a bill which he said would give the Puerto Rican people the right to elect their Governor and "an opportunity for the free exercise of the powers of local self-government.

The bill was drafted for the guidance of Congress by a committee under the chairmanship of Secretary of the Interior Ickes.

President Roosevelt had created the committee and asked it to consider changes in the Puerto Rican organic law.

Mr. Roosevelt sent the proposals of the committee to Capitol Hill with a message in which he said:

"There is no reason why their Governor and other officials should continue to be appointed from without. At this stage of Puerto Rican development, the withholding of this right is no longer necessary. There is no question of Puerto Ricans' ability now to administer their own internal affairs and to assume the attendant responsibility.

"It is recommended by the report of the committee that this fact be recognized at once. I agree that this should be done, and suggest that the Congress should consider it as a matter of right and justice for Puerto Ricans."

The United States got Puerto Rico from Spain in 1899. In 1917 Puerto Ricans received full American citizenship, and Congress enacted an organic law for governing the Caribbean island, reserving to the President of the United States the power to appoint the Governor, attorney general, education commissioner, auditor and supreme court justices.

The committee proposed a wide number of alterations which Ickes said "would provide a much more satisfactory basis for the government of Puerto Rico" and represent "substantial progress in the application of democratic principles" to the government of the insular people.

Stanton Urges Vast Air Expansion to Connect Most Cities of U. S. in Postwar Program

By Kurt Kelman
Post Staff Writer

Extension of air transportation to "every sizable community that has need of it" was advocated yesterday by Civil Aeronautics Administrator Charles I. Stanton, who appeared as first witness at the hearings of the Civil Aeronautics Board on local, feeder and pickup service.

Envisaging the transportation of all first-class mail by air, Stanton declared:

"When I speak of expansion, I mean hundreds of new schedules, thousands of miles of new routes, millions of new passengers, and great quantities of express or freight."

Stanton presented an array of figures and said surveys conducted by the CAA indicate establishment of some 850 stops throughout the country would bring well over 80 million people, and more than 90 per cent of the urban population, within the orbit of our air transportation system.

"Less than 600 new stops would be needed, since 273 are already authorized," Stanton said, estimating that "the total of construction and installation costs is about $227,000,000. Certainly, this is a moderate cost to pay for the facilities needed to provide a very large and adequate air transport system," he concluded.

In this connection, Stanton said "The Federal Government may have to extend its activities with respect to airports, particularly in the direction of establishing and financing a Federal aid program."

Although toning down exaggerated hopes "in the immediate postwar future" in regard to the helicopter's role in air transport, Stanton declared that "if we are prepared to take advantage of our unparelleled opportunities, the expansion of air traffic will be of a magnitude to astound most of us."

He based his remarks and observations on the thesis that "American aviation today, in all its phases and remifications, is the largest industry in the country," Stanton painted a picture of enormous strides expected in commercial air transportation after the war.

Representative Randolph (Democrat) of West Virginia, a long-time advocate of local feeder and pickup service and a pioneer air legislator, termed the extension of air service to our "backdoor communities perhaps the most significant development in American aviation."

"Washington will, no doubt, serve as the hub in the air transportation wheel," Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee, said, "which is to be developed with an unknown number of spokes."

"Its position as a great air terminal, connecting it with other world capitals, will be tremendously expanded by domestic service which will radiate from this metropolitan district."

"I believe," he added, "after a reasonable period of readjustment at the war's end, there will be 600 scheduled airline arrivals and departures here daily."

Randolph was among the more than 300 persons present at the opening session of the hearings which will be continued in the departmental auditorium throughout the week.

CAB Chairman L. Welch Pogue called Stanton as first witness. William J. Madden and Albert F. Beitel are serving as examiners of the case.

National Service Law Debated on Forum of the Air

While Charles Evans Hughes, jr., former United States Solicitor General, advocated the "immediate enactment of a national service law" over the American Forum of the Air yesterday, William S. Jack, president of Jack & Heintz, Inc., argued that "American methods can produce more efficiently than slave labor anywhere," and that "the issue at stake in this war boils down to whether dictatorship or democracy shall survive."

Other participants in the forum, broadcast over a coast-to-coast Mutual Network from the Shoreham Hotel, were J. Raymond Walsh, CIO economist, and the Rev. Walton E. Cole, pastor of historic Second Church of Boston.

Hughes declared that a National Service Act would be "the logical extension of the principle of equal obligation to render service in time of war, underlying the Selective Service Act, and made necessary by the kind of war we are in."

Jack cited his "25 years of manufacturing experience" in the claim that it is "much more efficient and profitable to persuade men than to try to drive them."

He warned "impatient people" against possible harm unwilling workers might do to our war production, and pleaded for "persuading our needed labor to go where it is most needed for the war effort."

Walsh asserted that production cannot be boosted by any laws, but rather by a reallocation of contracts, as indicated by recent WPB actions, and more efficient operations.

He also urged improvement of community facilities in war-crowded communities to increase production, the fuller use of labor-management committees, and declared that "we have failed relatively to overcome prejudice against the use of Negroes and women."

Dr. Cole asserted that "America has a vast untapped labor reservoir of some 34 million people who would be made available for the war effort through the program of selection, classification and restraining proposed by the Austin-Wadsworth bill."

The hand that rocks the cradle is rocking the Axis now!

In Russia—the shadow of the swastika came creeping over the country. Lengthening tentacles of death and destruction edged closer to the heart of the Soviets. Through the bloody sieges of Leningrad . . . Sevastopol . . . Taganrog . . . and then—Stalingrad and the incredible—the mighty German war machine clanked to a ponderous stop.

The Russian army bulwarked by valiant Russian women had turned the tide. Women in factories, women in the field, women with guns!

In China—an inexperienced and poorly equipped army slowly retreated before a superior Japanese force. A peaceful populace saw its cities fall under the boot of oppression and brutality. Hangkow . . . Shanghai . . . Nanking.

And everywhere side by side with the soldiers, the women of China fought, with knife and gun, with pitchforks, stones and clubs.

And over here—the women of America are also fighting. Fighting a battle of production, of transportation, of maintenance. They are producing the materials of war—crawling over locomotives in roundhouses, driving taxicabs and trucks, handling scores of jobs formerly filled by men now in uniform.

As the Axis is being rocked back on its heels, women are doing plenty of the rocking.

With us at Crosley the employment of women is not new. In the making of Crosley peacetime products we have had reason to know how competent they can be. One-half of our 8,000 employes are women, making precision instruments and other products of war. And, together with our men workers, they have enabled us to turn out a volume many times greater than our highest peacetime peak.

These are fighting women at Crosley . . . And they are an inspiration to the rest of us to do our utmost, to bring this war to the quickest possible end.

VFW Chieftain Offers 10-Point Vets' Program

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 28.—Robert T. Merrill, commander in chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, today proposed a 10-point veteran welfare program as a substitute for President Roosevelt's plan which, Merrill said, "is not sufficiently comprehensive."

joint opening session of the VFW's

In a speech prepared for the forty-fourth national encampment, Merrill said:

"We believe the President's six-point program is not sufficiently comprehensive if this Nation hopes to solve the tremendous veteran welfare problems we will have on our hands when the 11 million men serving in our armed forces are demobilized."

Merrill proposed:

1. Continuation of pay for six months for all honorably discharged members of the armed forces.

2. Federal educational aid for honorably discharged veterans whose education was interrupted.

3. Government care for all honorably discharged veterans of all wars who had 90 days' service or were discharged for disability.

4. Veteran pension and compensation based on reasonable cost-of-living index.

5. Veteran preference in employment on Federal, State, County and municipal jobs.

6. At least 10 per cent of all employes on Federal Government contract supply and construction work be honorably discharged veterans.

7. Pension rights to all widows and orphans of all honorably discharged veterans of all wars who had 90 days' service, regardless of service-connected disabilities.

8. Pension rights to honorably discharged veterans of all wars who served 90 days and who are unemployable, unable to obtain employment, or 10 per cent or more disabled, regardless of service-connected disabilities.

9. Increased allowance of 20 per cent in pensions and compensation and 5 per cent' additional above standard ratings in civil service job preference for veterans who served in combat in all wars.

10. Continuation of Veterans' Administration as an independent Federal agency with exclusive jurisdiction over veteran rehabilitation, vocational training, medical treatment, hospitalization, pensions and other veteran matters and continuation of Federal veterans' employment service.

National Auxiliary President Marie C. De Witt of St. Paul, Minn., predicted in her prepared talk that when the war is ended the people of Germany and Japan will plead for sympathy and understanding, and said that American women should not be fooled by "the trickery of our enemies to seek this avenue of escape."

In a message to the encampment, President Roosevelt extended his greetings, and said:

"I pledge that your country will continue to use every means at its command to win the war. After that we will share the problems and responsibilities involved in winning the peace.

"I know the Veterans of Foreign Wars can be counted on to do their part not only in the full prosecution of the war, but in the planning and carrying out of the post-war rehabilitation."

Keep Navy Ready In Postwar Days, Forrestal Warns

Undersecretary of Navy James Forrestal recommended yesterday that much of the Navy's four billion dollars worth of war plants be kept in peacetime reserve, ready to go into action with the fleet in the event of future wars.

"A nation that hates war must keep on hand the facilities to make war," he told the House Small Business Committee. "The country will want to maintain itself in preparation for immediate war."

Forrestall recommended the Navy keep in working order—"packed in grease if necessary"—many of its shipyards, ordnance plants in Michigan, Ohio and Kentucky, a torpedo plant in Illinois and the Pratt-Whitney aircraft engine plant in Kansas City.

The Undersecretary said the question of whether the plants should be leased to peacetime private operators, or kept in idle reserve, "is outside the Navy's jurisdiction.

Duke of Aosta Reaches U. S. Base

With the U. S. Navy at an Advanced Mediterranean Base, Sept. 24, (Delayed) (AP).—Italy's Duke of Aosta, who once was appointed king of Croatia but never went to that turbulent country to assume the crown, arrived here today in a private yacht. He was accompanied by Italy's top destroyer admiral, Amedo Nomis di Pollone.

The Duke expressed the hope that the delivery of the Italian fleet into Allied ports might enable the fleet to "assist the Allies in bringing an immediate peace to an Italy being ravaged by the enemy within and without."

McNutt Presents Stage Door Canteen Cake In Recognition of Hotel, Restaurant Aid

Years' Service to Million Men in Uniform Marked

Paul V. McNutt, chairman of the War Manpower Commission, who has served as a volunteer "bus boy" during the past year at the Stage Door Canteen, last night presented a birthday cake to a representative of Washington hotels and restaurants to express gratitude for entertainers and food provided for the canteen.

The Stage Door Canteen is celebrating the first anniversary of its organization this week, with birthday parties each night. Cakes are presented to representatives of groups that have cooperated with canteen workers in feeding and entertaining nearly a million servicemen who have been guests at the canteen since the opening last October.

In presenting the cake to L. Gardner Moore, president of the Washington Hotel Association, McNutt said: "I want to thank those people who have made this place possible and the hotels and restaurants of Washington have more than done their share. As long as the war lasts, we want this place to stand out as a center of hospitality for our boys in the armed forces."

After McNutt had cut the first piece of the three-tiered cake that was topped with a red candle, Mrs. Stephen T. Early, wife of the President's secretary, cut the second piece. Servicemen and hostesses received generous servings.

Monday night the canteen presented a cake to Paul Schwarz, president of the Musicians' Protective Union of Washington, in a gesture of appreciation to all musicians who have performed at the canteen. At 9 p. m. tonight, Representative Clare Boothe Luce will cut a cake and express gratitude to theatrical entertainers who have appeared on the canteen stage.

Thursday night tribute will be given all donors of money for canteen expenses, and Friday night appreciation will be expressed to newspapers. Radio performers will be given a cake Saturday night. The grand finale party is scheduled for Sunday night.

Herbert J. Bird, formerly of Swift and Co. head of poultry and egg section; Carl Lovegren, formerly president of Hunt Brothers Packing Co., Piedmont, Calif., head of canned fruits and vegetables section.

Wooing of Soviet Is Intrusted To Beaverbrook

Copyright by Chicago Sun

London, Sept. 28.—It was confirmed here today that Prime Minister Churchill had intrusted Lord Beaverbrook with the special task of creating a closer, lasting system of British and Russian collaboration.

The task he assumed following his return to the cabinet as Lord Privy Seal last week will take Beaverbrook to Moscow to confer with Premier Joseph Stalin and other Soviet leaders. His mission is expected to run parallel to plans arising from the coming tripower conference.

Maternity Care Bill on Its Way To White House

A bill appropriating $18,633,000 for maternity and infant care of wives of servicemen below the rank of staff sergeant is on the way to the White House after speedy and unanimous passage in the Senate yesterday.

Debate on the father draft gave way long enough to clear the track for passage of the bill providing for care of soldiers' wives and babies at an average of $84.50 a case. The same measure passed the House, also by unanimous vote, last Wednesday.

Duties of Citizens In Fire Prevention Week Are Outlined

Fire Chief Stephen T. Porter yesterday issued additional precautions to be observed for the prevention of fires as part of the program arranged for Fire Prevention Week proclaimed by President Roosevelt for the week of October 3 to 9.

He urged every citizen acquaint himself with fire hazards around their homes and places of business and eliminate them immediately.

Suggestions made yesterday were:

Heating plants should be thoroughly cleaned and checked for defects. Wall surfaces adjacent to furnaces or stores should be protected against danger of overheating. Never place hot ashes in wooden or paper containers. Use metal containers with tops for ashes and trash.

Field Invests 10 Millions In War Bonds

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 28.—Marshall Field 3d assumed possession of a fortune evaluted at 70 million dollars to 75 million dollars today—his fiftieth birthday—and bought ten million dollars' worth of war bonds.

The transactoins were as simple as the amounts involved were sizable. Checks, securities and deeds to real estate were presented to him and he signed receipts. Then he delivered a check for the war bonds to Harold H. Swift, chairman of the Illinois War Finance Committee, to carry out one of the largest purchases ever made by an individual.

The riches Field received today constituted the residue of the estate of his grandfather, Marshall Field 1st, one of Chicago's pioneer merchants. From the same source, Marshall Field 3d previously had drawn an estimated 93 million dollars—making an overall total of at least 163 million dollars. The staggered method of distribution was outlined in the will of Marshall Field 1st, who died in 1906.

"The progress of the war to its European climax affects so greatly the activities of all of us that I have made no special plans for observing the day," Field set forth in a statement. "The responsibilities of publishing, which are now my chief interest, were never greater than they are today."

Field is publisher of PM in New York and founder of the Chicago Sun.

Victory Sidelights

D. C. Housewives Asked to Aid Tin Can Salvage Collection

The District Salvage Committee yesterday appealed to housewives to give their fullest cooperation to the tin can salvage program and announced that the need here is acute because collections in the District fell from 324,000 pounds in March to slightly more than 150,000 pounds in August.

"It the war lasts another year or two, civilian supplies of canned fruits and vegetables may have to be cut sharply below present rationed levels because of a scarcity of tin," officials of the Agriculture Department announced yesterday.

They added while it would be possible to maintain consumption of canned foods at the present level for perhaps four more years, it would be undesirable to permit tin stocks to decline dangerously until the war is won in Japan, the country which controls most of the tin-producing areas.

OPA Head to Speak

Robert K. Thompson, District OPA director, will address the first fall meeting of the Federation of Citizens Associations Saturday in the District Board Room at 5 p. m.

He will discuss OPA problems and ask the cooperation of the federation in dealing with them.

In addition the federation will consider nomination for officers, members of the executive board, and for the Star Trophy Award.

Vice Chairman Named

Anne Carter Greene was yesterday named vice chairman of Volunteer Special Services of the District Red Cross.

She will assist Mrs. George Angus Garrett, chairman, in administering services of the gray ladies, nurses' aides, staff assistants, motor corps, canteen corps, and production and home services.

In 1936-37 Miss Greene was president of the Washington Junior League and now is on the league's advisory board. She also is a member of the board of directors of Children's Hospital and on the board of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society.

On The Dnieper

We may soon have an answer to one of the most tantalizing questions of the war. That question is whether the German army, as some claim, was really carrying out a strategic and largely uncontested withdrawal to a strong defensive position when it retreated to the Dnieper. For, as the opposing school of thought insists, this German withdrawal was at no point voluntary and at all points was forced by the Red army. If true, this may mean that the Wehrmacht is approaching a state of demoralization.

The truth or falsity of these contending views will be exposed at Kiev, at Dnepropetrovsk and at other key points along the Dnieper. If the Germans succeed in holding on to these bastions and preventing the Red army from making any large-scale crossings of that river barrier, the Germans may, even despite the loss of Smolensk, be vouchsafed a winter breathing spell in which to recuperate and build up their diminished forces on the Eastern Front. On the other hand, if the Russians capture Kiev and Dnepropetrovsk the German retreat will have to be resumed. In that case there is no telling how much farther west the German army will have to go before being able to establish a defensive line. Indeed, the forcing of the Dnieper line might actually turn the German retreat into a rout, with consequences of the very greatest importance for all belligerents.

As it is, the Russian offensive which began last July has already proved to be one of the most important of the war. Germany will never again be able to threaten the Caucasus, the Donets Basin, the Don Valley. And there is every reason to believe that even if the Russians are halted by a combination of German defensive strength, bad weather and lengthening supply lines, they will in due course be able to resume their advance before many months have passed. But a further advance at this time, involving as it would catastrophic potentialities for the Third Reich, would unquestionably hasten the end of the war. Thus the fighting on the Dnieper is a fight for truly staggering stakes.

Electoral Test

The voters of New York will be subjected in November to an unusual test of their intelligence and independence. When they enter the voting booths, they will find, unless Governor Dewey intervenes, that the official candidate of both the Republican and Democratic parties for Supreme Court Justice in the First Judicial District is a certain Thomas A. Aurelio. Yet both parties recently disavowed their indorsement of Mr. Aurelio on the basis of an allegation that he had secured his nomination through the intervention of a notorious underworld character; each party chose another candidate. Mr. Aurelio contested their actions and has now been sustained by New York State's Court of Appeals. The judicial decision holds that Mr. Aurelio is legally entitled to a place on the ballot as the official nominee of the major parties and that if he is morally unfit it is up to the electorate to reject him.

The logic of this decision seems irrefutable, however embarrassing it may be to New York's party chieftains. They bear the responsibility of having nominated a man whom they now acknowledge to be unfit for public office. But it is doubtful that they will be able to make their repudiation of him effective. People in New York, as elsewhere, often vote a straight party ticket without much deliberation as to the merits of individual candidates. Selectivity is not always highly operative at the level of Supreme Court justices, important as their posts happen to be. Normally, a candidate indorsed by both Republicans and Democrats can be depended upon to roll up something like 80 per cent of all the votes cast. How greatly the recent publicity concerning Mr. Aurelio will cut this percentage remains to be seen.

If the local politicians and ward heelers really want to beat Mr. Aurelio, they probably can do it. But they will have to put in a good deal of hard labor educating their particular segments of the electorate. And once they have them educated, the repercussions may be greater than they care to contemplate. For a voter who begins by deviating once from a straight ticket may end by exercising his own judgment all the way down the line. That could play hob with the regular party vote. It's possible, of course, that New York's voters will do precisely this without any prodding from the ward heelers. Their faith in the party's choices cannot have been enhanced by the Aurelio performance. November's balloting may reveal that the voters have been genuinely enfranchised.

Gallinger Scandal

Even when the charges made under oath before the Senate District Subcommittee about conditions at Gallinger Hospital are discounted 50 per cent or more for possible exaggeration, the fact remains that the situation has reached the proportion of an intolerable scandal. Taken at its face there is nothing implausible about the evidence; all the conditions described have existed at one time or another in various municipal institutions in various parts of the country. The difference is that in other communities the public indignation that has followed the exposure of such abuses has usually been powerful enough to force a radical and thoroughgoing reform. But then, in other communities, less ambiguously and anonymously governed than Washington, the responsibility for such abuses is easier to trace and retribution in one form or another much easier to inflict.

There is plenty of indignation in Washington about conditions at Gallinger; there has always been indignation. For more than a dozen years Gallinger has been in an almost continuous process of investigation. The evils and outrages uncovered at each investigation have surpassed those previously disclosed. But no matter what may be directly charged to the administration of the hospital, no matter how much negligence may be charged to the Department of Health or the District Commission, which have theoretic control over the hospital administration, everyone knows that the ultimate guilt for these conditions rests with that very body which is conducting this latest investigation, that is to say, with Congress itself. Now Congress is a body which has no responsibility whatever to the citizens of the District of Columbia, who include, of course, the patients at Gallinger. Congress is a body elected by people who have never heard of Gallinger Hospital and who, even if they had heard of it, could certainly be expected to take no more interest in the well-being of its inmates than have the Congressmen themselves.

The admission by one of the medical staff that disturbed patients in the psychopathic ward have been quieted by strapping them to their beds is shocking enough in itself. As to other charges, in justice to Dr. Bocock, the superintendent of the hospital, judgment must be suspended until all the evidence is in. Certainly anyone who may be proved guilty of having appropriated food intended for hospital patients should be prosecuted. Certainly any hospital officer who has condoned or even ignored the beating of patients should be removed. For if such an officer knew of such outrages and felt himself unable to put an end to them, he should in all decency have resigned and himself brought them to public attention. But it would be utterly absurd to say that the responsibility in such a case begins or ceases with the administrative official. And if the health officer to whom the superintendent is theoretically responsible, or the District Commissioner to whom the health officer is supposedly responsible, find or feel themselves hamstrung in such matters by the various influences permitted to work within the labyrinthine system called the District of Columbia government, it would be time for them to speak out.

But admitting all this, the ultimate blame for whatever is wrong at Gallinger rests, as we said, with Congress. And it is a safe prediction that Congress will do nothing about taking steps to end this perennial scandal unless or until the scandal has reached proportions that will shock even those to whose indignation the Congressmen are obliged to pay a respectful attention.

Evacuation

Foreign newspapermen and refugees who have lately succeeded in crossing Germany's frontiers report a wholesale civilian evacuation from Berlin. One reputable observer, a Swedish journalist, estimates that as many as two million residents of the Nazi capital have moved away from it since August 3. Such figures are at best guesswork and are obviously susceptible to exaggeration; it does no harm to discount them liberally in interpreting their significance. But they do have a significance. And from the Nazi point of view it cannot be other than deeply portentous.

Not only Berlin but other major German cities as well are certainly undergoing a progressive reduction of their normal populations. The survivors of Hamburg and the Ruhr industrial communities have been shifted to a variety of points around the Reich. Their eyewitness accounts of the bombings they endured may well have engendered a considerable measure of wanderlust among their fellow citizens. Berliners in particular, knowing the determination of the RAF to make the capital a special target, can be pardoned for desiring some change of climate. It is understandable enough that women and children and the aged and any men whose presence is not urgently required should be streaming toward the provinces.

But where can they seek safety? Eastern Germany, it is true, enjoys a relative immunity from air attack. But with Foggia now in our hands, the southern portion of this area may no longer be so secure. The Russians, too, are rapidly moving to a point from which they will be in a position to threaten East Prussia and Silesia. It is a prospect concerning which our satisfaction may decently be tempered with pity for the innocents endangered. But it is also a prospect which can scarcely fail to have profound effects upon the German psyche.

When men and women are removed from their homes, from their familiar associations, they are in a very real sense uprooted—that is, deprived of moral and spiritual sustenance. They no longer have accustomed grooves in which to carry on their functions in the social scheme. The result is a dislocation of incalculable proportions. The difficulties of housing, transportation, sanitation, food distribution are feverishly aggravated. And at the same time the will to work and to fight is grievously undermined.

The end of this dislocation may or may not be national collapse. Britain endured a considerable degree of it and emerged invigorated. Many Londoners experienced evacuation—either for themselves or for members of their families. Many found, however, that it was preferable to keep their homes intact, even at the risk of death for loved ones. In England the terror lifted. But in Germany the signs all indicate that it will only grow in intensity. The evacuees must be brooding upon this prospect with fearful earnestness.

Foggia

The capture of Foggia by the British Eighth Army constitutes the most important Allied victory of the Italian campaign since the Germans were beaten back at Salerno by General Clark's troops effectively aided by Allied sea and air power. In contrast with the bitter and costly fighting in the Naples sector the advance on Foggia was relatively easy and uncontested, General Montgomery's forces covering a distance of 15 miles on the last day.

It is evident that Marshal Kesselring, the German commander, finding himself unable effectively to defend all of his positions in south Italy with equal force has largely concentrated on the defense of Naples and its approaches, thus making it easier for the British Eighth Army to move rapidly up the east coast of the peninsula. But the ease with which Montgomery took Foggia should not be allowed to obscure the importance of his victory. It is of very great importance, indeed. It gives the Allies control of a very large modern airport surrounded by a cluster of subsidiary airfields which the Allies will soon be able to use both against the German troops and communications in Italy and as bombing bases from which to bring Allied air power to bear on German industrial areas in south Germany, Austria and Czechoslovakia. It is not too much to say, in fact, that Foggia is the greatest prize of the Italian campaign to date.

Musical Chairs

An unheralded turnabout has taken place in the processes of government. Reorganizations are not new. The Administration has been reorganizing itself without surcease ever since it first became known as the New Deal. But the method of reorganization has suddenly and astonishingly been reversed. It is operating now by subtraction, instead of by addition.

In days gone by, when an administrator revealed shortcomings, there was no thought of displacing him; he was merely shelved, set aside, as it were, but retained in all his official glory. If a Secretary of Labor failed to solve all our labor problems, we simply established a National Labor Relations Board. If a Secretary of State did not move with sufficient vigor in the foreign economic field, we created a Board of Economic Warfare. But the prestige and perquisites of the delinquent officials remained unimpaired. That was the era of expansion.

Nowadays, the watchword has become consolidation. Official craniums are being lopped off with frightening frequency. Indeed the President now seems to be playing a variant of the game called musical chairs. While the music sounds, the official family marches warily in a circle, a seat assigned to each. But when the music suddenly ceases and they scramble to sit down—behold, one chair (perhaps even two) has surreptitiously been pulled away. Someone is left standing, red and embarrassed, and is counted out.

The Vice President and Milo Perkins were the earliest victims. The latest is Sumner Welles. The rest of our officials were scrambled around a bit and may not know precisely where they're sitting. But at least they still have seats. The perplexing thing about this highly diverting procedure is that it unfortunately seems often to eliminate the best and ablest participants. Who's next? The music is commencing again and the procession moves slowly around. We await with bated breath the crash of another sudden silence. When it comes, the sitters once more may be more numerous than the seats.

PLENITUDE

O strange rich summer! Out of heat and dearth
From barren field and parching river bed—
Out of the starving hours of the earth
My beautiful strong sheaves are harvested!
There were no grapes upon the withered vine,
There was no fruit beneath the orchard tree—
And yet was pressed anew the headiest wine
That we may drink, who wear mortality.

I shall not fear the future any more
Though winter come, with darkness and the cold;
My granaries can scarcely hold their store
And in the vats the new wine, growing old,
Mellows and deepens to a sheer delight—
This bread, this wine, shall last my longest night!

Moscow Meeting

By Mark Sullivan

Hull Must Attend

NEXT SATURDAY Secretary of State Cordell Hull will be 72 years old. It is expected, tentatively, that during the month he will take an arduous journey, by air to Moscow. His presence there is rather urgently desirable. At least his absence would be held, in some quarters, to be awkward.

There is planned, for Moscow, a meeting of the heads of the foreign departments of the three big Allied governments — Foreign Commissar V. Molotov of Russia, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden of Britain, and American Secretary of State Hull. The purpose of this meeting is to prepare the way for a later and extremely important meeting, one of heads of state—President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin. Because the meeting of heads has been difficult to bring about—is indeed still in the stage of hope—it follows that the preliminary meeting is likewise important. It is felt that Mr. Hull's presence is desirable because it would be less than courteous for America to send anyone of lesser rank than that of the other two conferees. In the relations of the United States and Britain to Russia, punctilious courtesy is emphasized.

THAT MR. HULL should be obliged to take so arduous a journey is the occasion of radio and newspaper comment. Much of this is casual and natural; it is like the comment that attended the recent air trip of 76-year-old Secretary of War Stimson to Britain and North Africa.

But some of the comment takes on the flavor of wish—wish that Mr. Hull would find it inexpedient to go to Moscow. This type of comment comes in some cases from radical sources, themselves sympathetic to Russia, who think Mr. Hull does not sufficiently share their views. On the radio the other night, one radical commentator said—not as a matter of information but as an expression of his own judgment—that he thought the Russian government had asked that the meeting be held in Moscow, rather than in Washington or London, in the hope that Mr. Hull might not attend.

This sort of thing is of a piece with assertions made some time ago that Mr. Hull is "anti-Russian," which was denounced by Mr. Hull as a "falsehood" and by President Roosevelt by a shorter and stronger word. And this in turn is of a piece with criticisms and attacks, over a considerable period, of a sort to undermine Mr. Hull.

SOME CRITICISM of the State Department has come from sincere and disinterested sources. Some of it may be justified by some conditions, including delay the Department has experienced in reorganizing itself to meet enlarged needs and functions. But some of the attacks have been on plainly ideological grounds. They have come from persons and groups who wished Mr. Hull to follow courses other than the one he chose—with respect to our relations with France, his support of General Eisenhower's recognition of Admiral Darlan in North Africa, the policy of dealing with King Victor Emmanuel and Marshal Badoglio in Italy, rather than with persons and groups preferred by the critics. In all these and other policies, Mr. Hull has been squarely supported by President Roosevelt—indeed Mr. Roosevelt has not only stood back of Mr. Hull but alongside him and in front of him. Whether Mr. Hull goes to Moscow himself, or sends another, he is secure in authority and support of it by the President.

The persons and groups who have special interests or wishes about our relations with European countries, including Russia, while not large in number, are energetic and vocal. But in all these matters, and in the coming conference at Moscow, the really important thing is that the American people as a whole should have confidence in what is done.

The people cannot possibly know the details of these questions. They must be enabled to accept what is done on faith. This means faith in the officials who act for the United States. The officials in whom the country has faith become the symbols through which public affairs are carried on. The truth is, this is how democracy works. The individual citizen to a large degree takes his part in public affairs through thinking of public men as symbols.

In the public life of the United States at this time, Secretary Hull is one of our most exalted symbols. Through more than ten years as Secretary of State, and a lifetime before that in the Senate and House, Mr. Hull has come to symbolize qualities of wisdom and character and dependability, qualities that evoke from the people respect and even veneration, qualities that bring to a man, in a real sense, the status and authority of an elder statesman.

The Balkans

By Paul Schubert

German Defense Problem

DURING THE past few days the Town of Ogulin has been in the news. Not in a prominent way—the way of Naples, or Smolensk, or Kiev, though no doubt the episodes at Ogulin were just as exciting and important to those who took part in them . . . and the men who died at Ogulin were just as dead.

Ogulin was reported occupied by Jugoslav guerillas—the irregular Balkan army which is becoming an increasing factor in the news from the Balkan Peninsula.

Ogulin is a sleepy little county seat a couple of hours inland by rail from Fiume-Susak and the Adriatic coast. Ogulin has a courthouse, a church, a few dusty streets, a general store very reminiscent of old-fashioned back-country American general stores.

The inn is—or was—a cut above the average. Ogulin is a junction point; the railway from Zagreb to the coast divides there, one branch going down to Susak, the other running south through beautiful farm and forest country to Split. Ogulin is thus an overnight stopping point for traveling salesmen from Zagreb on their visits to Dalmatian back districts. The men of Zagreb like good food and good Dalmatian wine. Ogulin's inn provided both.

THE INNKEEPER was a courtly, stocky, elderly man who had once been in America, and therefore went out of his way to be effusively hospitable to all Americans who happened that way. His son, a "boy" of 55 or so, was a bundle of dynamic energy, the life of the place, with an eye on the kitchen, the porter, the maids, the bar, the sidewalk tables in front of the building, the courtyard in the rear—

My wife and I arrived at this inn on foot, with packs on our backs, and put up for the night. We had come to Ogulin in search of information about trout fishing. The innkeepers, father and son, obviously considered trout of importance solely from the eating point of view, but promised to make inquiries about the sporting possibilities.

In the morning, thanks to their inquiries, Mr. Popovitch arrived. Mr. Popovitch was wizened, elderly and pedagogical. He was a schoolmaster, head of the district agricultural school; it developed that he was an authority on methods of plowing and on the chemistry of Dalmatian soil. It also developed that he was a passionate devotee of fly fishing, wet or dry—that he knew every stream in the district, and literally every trout, and that he had a streak of boyish enthusiasm that made him one of the most delightful individuals it has ever been our good fortune to meet.

How remote that seems—the sleepy, dusty town, the slow-moving ox-carts passing through the streets, the peasant women trudging along barefoot with bundle on head, baby on back and knitting needles working ceaselessly . . . our trout expedition setting off in a rented car over rocky roads into the backwoods.

MR. POPOVITCH was a Serb . . . the innkeepers were Croats . . . the peasants were swarthy men with deep, primitive eyes—men of the countryside, who knew every brook, every shortcut, every contour under those deep forests.

Jugoslavia is large. There aren't many roads. Villages are incredibly primitive. Ogulin was, by contrast, metropolitan . . . it seemed almost unbelievable that there was such a thing as an agricultural school with Mr. Popovitch in charge of it, to say nothing of the fish hatchery that he showed us, stocked with rainbows imported from the American Rockies . . .

As we drove through the district, Mr. Popovitch's talk came back again and again to past wars. The names of towns, he said, were Serbian in that part of Croatia—and military; they indicated the forgotten conquest of a forgotten Serbian army that must have occupied those parts for a long period . . .

"But the people drove them out again," he said.

How can the Germans, alien, northern, harsh in their organized military machinery . . . how can they garrison Jugoslavia?

All the men in Germany couldn't police and suppress these people. These Jugoslav men melt into the hills, taking their women and children with them . . . Even the pedantic Mr. Popovitches have the feeling of the wild remote forests.

I wonder if Mr. Popovitch is fishing those streams now, providing food for the guerillas? Probably not. Probably the trout have all been taken by the peasant method which he despised—a stick of dynamite tossed in when the game warden was elsewhere.

The Balkan peninsula is made up of thousands of Ogulins.

They will welcome us as liberators. But even without us, they will never be conquered by the Germans.

Why We Fight

It is to be hoped that everyone who has access to The Washington Post is reading Walter Lippmann's "U. S. Foreign Policy," for it brings out some of the true motives underlying the First World War: "The Nation did not go to war because it wished to found a league of nations; it went to war to preserve American security."

The same thing can be said for this war. We are in it because we feared that Germany would be able, in time, to reach our homeland with her bombs across the Atlantic.

Lippmann says of the last war: "The security of the United States demanded that no aggressively expanding imperial power like Germany should be allowed to gain the mastery of the Atlantic Ocean." These are the true reasons which are back of what we are trying to do today.

Listen, and you will hear people saying that the English, and French do not appreciate what we are doing for them. Why should they? We are not doing anything for them. We are in this war to save our own skins. Any benefits which come to foreign powers from our participation is purely accidental and calls for no appreciation.

Apologies To Russia

For 20 years prior to our entrance to the war, Russia has been the victim of propaganda falsehoods by thousands. Stories about how incompetent the Communists were, how the leaders were feared and hated, how their airplanes were "a mass of rivets" and everything was just a mess.

It took the performance of the Russian army against the German panzer divisions to pry loose some of the truth about the effectiveness of the administration within Russia. As one newspaperman said, upon his return from Russia, America should have an "Apologize to Russia Week," to acknowledge the extent of the organized injustices of the propaganda fed to our people.

Can you blame the Russian high command for not sharing with the Allies all the secrets of the Russian military successes or her plans for the postwar? Russia is the only member of the League of Nations that wanted to keep the joint promise to disarm after World War I. Russia does not trust the democracies. Do you blame her?

Steak To Blood Donors

After my last donation to the Red Cross Blood Bank, I went to a restaurant uptown to have a steak dinner, in the company of a young lady who had also given blood.

The proprietor of the restaurant happened to hear us kidding the waitress to the effect that we needed a good steak because we had contributed blood. He insisted that we have dinner "on the house," ordered two of the best steaks I have ever tasted, and reserved the same order after our next contribution, which is October 12. This, he said, was the least he could do for the boys who are fighting and dying for him and other Americans.

Of course, this restaurant owner wishes to remain anonymous for fear of being swamped by every blood donor in the city. But it struck me that if the other restaurants that are doing a thriving wartime business would do likewise and spread the load among them, there would be an immediate increase in blood donors—and the favorable publicity wouldn't do the restaurants any harm, either.

Unpredictable 'Teens

In supplementary form to the letter of James Emery Brooks, August 30:

I am 18 years old. I have attended the University of Maryland for a year and a half, and have taken four courses in political science. Therefore, I feel that I am in a justifiable position to answer partly the question of "Teen-Age Voters."

In my youth I was brought up predominantly among adults, so I matured rather early. At the age of 15, I was already reading the editorial page before the comic page. When I took courses in political science, I was astonished to see the general ignorance of the class toward current political matters. The class was formed of youths from the ages of 17-22. When the text was studied, there was very little comprehension until the professor went thoroughly through each detail.

So, although I am inclined to disagree with him that every youth of the age of 18 has not the intelligence to vote, I do agree that it would be endangering the political scene to allow an amendment to be passed to permit them to have suffrage as a whole. A point to be made is, of course, that I am referring to college youth; if they are in this unpredictable, unstable stage, try and imagine what the rest of the country's youths are in.

Youth's Priority

Henry Wallace has nominated Franklin Roosevelt as permanent chairman of the peace conference. I wonder who directed him to make this nomination?

The chairman and all parties to the peace conferences must be confined entirely to those that are fighting this war, the soldiers, sailors and marines that are being shot at. They are the ones earning the privilege of planning our future. It is their future; why shouldn't they plan it?

There must not be anyone in attendance from the United States, Great Britain, Canada, China, Russia, Germany, Italy, etc., unless they actually fought at the front and started in the war below the rank of second lieutenant or ensign.

Welcome Stranger

It may not appeal to many of us to take a stranger into our homes, but this is how I have figured out I am doing something for the war effort by renting my guest room. I am helping out on the housing shortage and providing comfortable quarters for one of the many young officers detailed to the Navy Department in Washington. With what he pays me in rent I am buying a $50 War Bond every month by making a small cash addition to the amount. Thus I am helping Uncle Sam and laying by money for myself. I may add that I am doing this at very small trouble for myself, as I find these young men (I have had several of them) very considerate.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Tammany Transplanted

("Tammany Hall, changing its name to the New York County Democratic Committee, has moved to a suite in an office building after selling its home to Local 91 of the International Ladies Garment Union."—News item.)

The tumult and the shouting die,
The sachems and the braves deny,
And all the pomp of yesterday
Is piled into a moving cart.

The very name of Tammany
Is lowered from the big tepee;
Initials are the thing today,
And it's the N.Y.C.D.C.

The braves depart with misty eyes;
A look behind they glady shun:
They would not see the tiger's lair
Transformed to "Local Ninety-one."

They would not see the famous Hall
Of Croker, Murphy and Bill Tweed
Become the House of Skirts and Pants—
And other clothes the ladies need.

They would not see the feathers go
And watch the moccasins fade out,
To make way for the frilly things
For debutante and stylish stout.

The Kennedys and Currys sigh
As things are torn up by the roots;
And halls which once ruled town and State
Now merely rule the cloaks and suits.

What is that creature slinking there,
Where needle workers now seem proud? . . .
It is the tiger (or what's left).
Who see a sign "No Cats Allowed!"

Abandoned! Left there in the lurch,
The tiger contemplates the change.
It once had power, pull and might;
But now it only has the mange!

And now the leaders swing into
The avenue called Madison;
The ancient sign of "Tammany"
Is now the address "Three-Three-One."

An office building suite of rooms,
Precise and clean and up-to-date,
With shiney desks and glossy walls—
And other things that Injuns hate.

Just "Three-Three-One," a mere address,
Expensive, slick and, oh, so light!
'TIS WELL THAT CHARLEY MURPHY'S DEAD
AND CROKER'S CASKET LID IS TIGHT!

New Undersecretary

By Ernest K. Lindley

Stettinius Natural Diplomat

THE MOST essential qualifications for an Undersecretary of State at the present time probably are:

LINDLEY

(1) A wide and sure knowledge of world affairs.

(2) An intimate knowledge of the personnel of the State Department.

(3) Skill as a diplomat.

(4) Efficiency as an Administrator.

(5) Ability to win and hold the confidence of Congress.

(6) Understanding of the economic operations which must be coordinated with the over-all foreign policies of the Government and the ability to work with the men actively responsible for these operations.

The first qualification requires education and experience which can only rarely be acquired outside diplomacy and journalism. Mr. Stettinius does not have the backlog of knowledge and training in this field which can be found among our best career diplomats or among the ex-amateurs who have had a long seasoning in the State Department or foreign service. But he is by no means a green hand. As Lend-Lease Administrator he has dealt extensively with most of our Allies.

HIS LACK of intimate knowledge of the personnel of the State Department and its foreign service may handicap him as a reorganizer and administrator. This handicap may be offset in part by the fact that he is not associated with any clique. But a fresh man from the outside almost invariably finds difficulty in making his way within the State Department. It is not at all certaint that Mr. Stettinius will really be able to exercise the authority which he, or anyone else, would need to do a first-class administrative job.

MR. STETTINIUS is a natural diplomat, although of only limited experience in the field of international negotiations. As to his capacities as an administrator there is no doubt. The only question is whether he will have the authority he needs to exercise them.

The appointment undoubtedly has met with overwhelming approval in Congress. This is partly because Mr. Stettinius has a conservative background as a leading industrial executive. But it is also due partly to the impression he has made on the individual members of the Senate and House, especially during the hearings on the renewal of lend-lease last spring. His written reports were excellent and his own direct and pleasing manner made friends for him.

As to (6), Mr. Stettinius is more than amply qualified.

IN SUM total, Mr. Stettinius is generally endowed with all the qualifications except those which depend upon long experience in diplomacy. In other ways, he holds a clear edge on most, if not all, of the men with such special training. On the whole, the appointment was excellent, especially when account is taken of Mr. Stettinius' natural intelligence. For some time, however, the role of the Undersecretary necessarily will be somewhat different from what it was under Sumner Welles and other career diplomats who have held the post. Mr. Welles was not only a capable administrator, with intimate knowledge of the personnel of the department. He was an expert among experts. Perhaps more than any of his predecessors he had acquired prestige and respect in foreign offices throughout the world. He had also a breadth of outlook not always found among diplomatic career men. He would have made an extremely competent Secretary of State, perhaps even a great one.

Mr. Stettinius, like Mr. Welles before him, was chosen by the White House, not by Mr. Hull. Mr. Stettinius almost certainly will not exercise the influence or policy-making that Mr. Welles did. He has capacities which the State Department needs and which, if he is allowed to exercise them, should improve its administration and its relations with other agencies, in addition to strengthening its influence in Congress during a period when momentous steps must be taken with the concurrence of the legislative branch. But with the resignation of Mr. Welles, the Government has lost special abilities which cannot be promptly replaced and are needed more than ever during the conversations and negotiations which will determine the organization of peace.

Rail Workers Call 4-Cent Raise 'Insult'

The country was faced last night with a new rail labor crisis, providing another important test of the holding power of the much-battered "Little Steel" wage formula as a presidential emergency board recommended a 4 cents an hour wage increase for 300,000 operating employes of the Nation's rail carriers which union officials promptly branded as "unsatisfactory."

The board, by a vote of 2 to 1, recommended the increase—in strict accordance with the "Little Steel" yardstick—but commented that it would have suggested a more substantial boost but for the action of Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson rejecting a recommendation for an increase of 8 cents an hour to more than one million nonoperating railroad workers. The nonoperating workers were not due any increase under the wage yardstick.

Retroactive Till April 1

The increase—to add an estimated $40,500,000 to annual railroad payrolls—may go into effect at the end of 30 days, retroactive to April 1, if approved by Vinson and accepted by the railroads and the five operating railroad brotherhoods.

Special emergency boards, rather than the War Labor Board, handle railroad wage disputes, but Vinson has indicated that he expects the boards to adhere to approved WLB policies.

Vinson's rejection of the recommendation in the case involving the 15 nonoperating railroad unions has been a sore spot for months, with some union leaders hinting at a possible general railroad strike.

Pact Not Yet Approved

After Vinson rejected the 8-cent decision, railroad labor and management succeeded in composing their differences and signed a contract providing for the same 8-cents-an-hour increase, but the Government has not moved to approve the pact.

Consideration was being given in some quarters to combining the two cases, using the new operating decision as a basis for granting the nonoperating unions a similar adjustment.

Thomas C. Cashen, president of the Switchmen's Union of North America, branded the emergency board's recommendation "an insult," in a statement to the Associated Press in Buffalo, N. Y.

"It is my opinion," he said, "the employes will not accept the recommendation."

Harry Fraser, president of the Order of Railway Conductors, said at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, that the suggested boost "is not in any sense of the word satisfactory."

Out of Harmony

"Instead of making the decision on the record, the board limits the men to the Little Steel formula, which is of itself completely out of harmony with changes in the cost of living," Fraser said.

"The recommendation ignores other elements, such as increased responsibility and productivity, and inequalities which exist because of workers in comparable industries having received increases which place their wages out of line with the rail rate."

The operating unions originally demanded a 30 per cent increase or $3 a day, whichever is greater. The award in effect offers them slightly more than one-ninth their original demand. Frank M. Swacker, minority member of the panel, accused the majority of placing "too narrow" a construction on Vinson's opinion in the nonoperating case, and recommended the granting of a 7½-cents-an-hour increase.

The panel majority consisted of Walter P. Stacy, chief justice of the Supreme Court of North Carolina, and I. L. Sharfman, professor of economics at the University of Michigan. Both Stacy and Sharfman have had experience serving on War Labor Board panels. Edward J. Flynn, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, was counsel for the railroad unions at emergency board hearings.

GOP to Fight White House Tax Program

Administration plans to stake their 1944 revenue on a single 12-billion-dollar program, revealed yesterday after a White House conference, will be met by House Republicans with a formal counter-proposal of their own, expected to call for not more than five billion dollars, it was learned last night.

The Republican program may be revealed this week, in a maneuver apparently calculated at taking the edge off the Administration program which is scheduled for an unveiling before the House Ways and Means Committee Monday.

Issue to Be Drawn

The maneuver gave promise of raising the forthcoming discussion on 1944 revenue to the fighting pitch produced by the political rough-and-tumble over pay-as-you-go taxation last spring.

Republican ire was fanned by the fact the White House conference, like two earlier ones attended exclusively by Democrats and Administration officials, Chairman George (Democrat) of Georgia, head of the Senate Finance Committee, Representative Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina, chairman of the House committee; Secretary Morgenthau of the Treasury, and Randolph Paul, Treasury tax expert, were those listed by the White House as attending the conference.

Some Democrats on the Ways and Means Committee, said privately they wished the Republican tax experts had been admitted to the conferences from the beginning. It would have made the approach to writing a tax bill easier, these members said.

At the same time, Republicans, who generally held the whip-hand in the House last spring in drafting pay-as-you-go taxation, gave signs of believing they now stand a better chance than the Administration of selling their tax ideas to Congress.

Fuel was added to the Republican resentment by these details of the Administration tax program which were described in Capitol and official quarters as being close to the blueprint which will be presented at Monday's hearing:

1. The Administration will stake its case on a single program for raising about 12 billion dollars, above existing revenue, rather than suggesting a variety or programs, calculated to raise variously six, eight and 10 billion.

2. Of the 12 billion, about 2.5 billion is to be asked from increasing the size and the number of excise taxes 1.1 billion by increasing the corporate combined normal and surtax rate from 40 per cent to 50 per cent and other modifications; and the remaining 8 billion to come from individual incomes.

3. To achieve the proposed intake from individuals, a scale of rates is planned ranging from about 32 per cent in the lowest brackets, compared to the present 19 per cent normal and first surtax and 3 per cent Victory tax; up to 90 per cent at $90,000 of net taxable income and over (compared with rates that now level off at 90 per cent at $200,000 income).

The Gallup Poll . . .

Confident on Jobs

By Henry Durant,
Director, British Institute of Public Opinion.

The British Institute of Public Opinion, the Gallup Poll of Britain, has conducted interviews among American soldiers in England to determine what they think about the chances for jobs when they return to America after the war. The findings, as reported by cable from London, are shown below.

London, Sept. 28.—American soldiers interviewed here in England by the British Institute of Public Opinion are highly optimistic about their chances for jobs when they return to America after the war.

The great majority think they have definite positions lined up, and even those with no job in mind believe it will not be difficult to find one.

Moreover, the weight of opinion among them is that the chances of getting jobs will be better under a Democratic administration in Washington than under a Republican administration.

Five hundred American privates, noncommissioned officers, and officers were interviewed on the subject of postwar jobs by the field staff of the British Institute in six areas in and around London.

The first question put to them was:

"Do you have a definite job ready for you when you return after the war?"

The results are:

Yes	62%
No	27%
Plan to continue schooling	3
Don't know	8

The group who said they have no definite job in mind was asked:

"Do you think it will be hard to find a job?"

The majority express optimism, as the following shows:

Yes, will be hard	24%
No, will not be hard	56
Undecided	20

Leaders of the Republican and Democratic Parties in America will be particularly interested in the replies which the soldiers gave to the next question:

"Which way do you think there will be more jobs after the war—if the Republicans are in power in Washington, or if the Democrats are?"

The vote indicates that the Democratic Party has apparently stolen a march over the Republicans in respect to the issue of postwar jobs for servicemen. A much larger number think they will be better off under Democrats than under the Republicans. However, a substantial number say it would make no difference.

Here is the way the replies line up.

More jobs with Republicans in power	11%
More jobs with Democrats in power	45
Makes no difference	23
Undecided	21

The vote may be a reflection of the fact that a governmental program for aid to servicemen after the war was recently announced by President Roosevelt.

Stage 'Props' Used in Salerno Rehearsal

By John Steinbeck

Somewhere in the Mditerranean War Theater.—American troops trained on the beaches of North Africa for the beaches of Italy. It was hot and dusty on the land and back from the coast there were many training props for them to work with. There were wooden landing barges standing on the ground in which dusty men crouched until at a signal the ramp went down and they charged out and took cover. To get ashore quickly and to get down behind some hummock of earth where the machine guns can't get at you is very important stuff in landing.

And so they practiced over and over, and instead of getting wet they only raised clouds of dust, the light, reddish dust of Africa, in color a little like the red soil of Georgia.

And when the men had learned to leap out and charge and take cover and to run forward again, presenting as little of themselves as possible to the observing officers, they went to the set to learn how to conduct themselves on entering an enemy town.

There were sets like those in a Hollywood studio in the old silent days, wooden fronts and tall and short buildings with open windows and little streets between, and there the men learned how to crouch on a corner and how to slink under the cover of walls. They learned with practice grenades how to blast out a machine gun set up in a building. It was strange to see them rehearsing, as though for a play. It went on for weeks.

Like Beaches at Salerno

And when they had become used to the method and when they reacted almost instinctivtly, they were taken finally to the Mediterranean beaches, the long, white beaches, which are not very unlike the beaches at Salerno, The water is incredibly blue there and the beaches are white. And the water is very salty. You float like a cork on it. On the beaches they practiced with real landing barges. The teams put out to sea and then turned and made runs for the shore and the iron ramps clattered down and the men rushed ashore and crept and wiggled their way up to the line of the shore where the grapevines began for there are vineyards in Italy, too.

When they had practiced a little while, machine guns with live ammunition fired over their heads, but not very far over their heads, to give them a real interest in keeping low.

Now in larger groups they rushed in from the sea and charged up into the vines and crept up through the vineyards and moved inland. An amazing number of men can disappear into a vineyard so that you can't see them at all.

The dark Algerian grapes were ripe and as they crawled the men picked the grapes and ate them and the incidence of G. I. dysentery skyrocketed but there is no way of keeping a dusty, thirsty man from eating ripe grapes, particularly if they are hanging right over his head, when he lies under the vines.

Over and Over

Over and over again they captured this little sector and climbed up and captured the heights. They had to learn to do it in the daytime because when they would really do it it would be in the dark of the early morning. But when the training for each day was finished, the men went back to the beaches and took off their clothes and played in the water. The water was warm and delightful and the salt stung their eyes. Their bodies grew browner day by day until they were only a little lighter than the Arabs.

At night they were very tired and there is not much to do in Africa after dark anyway. No love is lost for the Arabs. They are the dirtiest people in the world and among the smelliest. The whole countryside smells of urine, 4000 years of urine. That is the characteristic smell of North Africa. The men were not allowed to go into the native cities because there was a great deal of disease and besides there are too many little religious rules and prejudices that an unsuspecting dogface can run afoul of. And there wasn't much to buy and what there was cost too much. The prices have skyrocketed on the coming of the troops.

The men slept in their pup tents and drew their mosquito nets over them and scratched and cursed all night until, after a time, they were too tired to scratch and curse and they fell asleep the moment they hit the blankets. Their minds and their bodies became machine-like. They did not talk about the war. They talked only of home and of clean beds with white sheets and they talked of ice water and ice cream and places that did not smell of urine. Most of them let their minds dwell on snow banks and the sharp winds of Middle Western winter.

In Senate Speech

Post Praised For 'Attack' Sponsorship

In a Senate speech yesterday, Senator Burnet R. Maybank (Democrat) of South Carolina highly commended The Washington Post for its sponsorship of the "Back the Attack" exhibition of Army prowess.

Senator Maybank described the show as "worthwhile, instructive, enlightening and from every angle, beneficial in educating the public on the Army war activities." He said the entire country should have had an opportunity to see it.

The text of his speech follows:

"On Sunday, September 26, at the closing performance of the 'Back the Attack' Army show held at the Monument Grounds here in Washington, Hon. James Byrnes, South Carolina's distinguished son, Director of War Mobilization, was asked to make the concluding speech. I shall ask that this excellent speech be included as part of my remarks.

"I wish at this time, Mr. President, to just say a word about the 'Back the Attack' show itself. It was sponsored by a paper that has been prominent in American life for many years—The Washington Post. The owner and editor of that paper, Mr. Eugene Meyer, and the managing editor, Mr. Alexander F. Jones, are to be greatly commended for their patriotic endeavor to give to the people of Washington at least a few of the many outstanding things the Army is doing in connection with the war.

"It was a most enlightening show and exhibition. It was not only entertaining and amusing but very instructive. Exhibitions were given by soldiers of all colors and creeds and their performances were exceedingly well done. Anyone not having see this show can hardly comprehend the vast activities of the Army in this war effort. The effective and material activities of the Army represented—great guns that can be easily transported and maneuvered, large tanks which are none other than land battleships, that can be moved with alacrity and effectiveness, etc. Whether the activities are on foot, wheels, horseback or dog team, they are being handled most efficiently. The Medical Corps is most expertly managed and all facilities for the comfort of the soldier are streamlined to the 'nth' degree. It is a show that the whole country should have an opportunity to witness and may I again compliment The Washington Post for its conceiving the thought for such a wonderful undertaking! I am sure that I speak for the more than 1,700,000 people who witnessed this show and its exhibits when I say that it is worthwhile, instructive, enlightening and from every angle beneficial in educating the public on the Army war activities."

Senate Body Weighs Peace Move Today

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer

Faced with a possible motion to discharge them on allegations of dilatory tactics, members of the Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee considering postwar resolutions will meet today in executive session to hold the first official discussion of the Fulbright resolution passed by an overwhelming majority in the House last week.

Senator Ball (Republican) of Minnesota said yesterday on the eve of the subcommittee meeting that he and the three other sponsors of the Ball-Burton-Hatch-Hill resolution for a postwar organization may bring in a motion to discharge the Foreign Relations Committee of all responsibility for postwar resolutions.

Ball to Ask Action

Ball said that within approximately three weeks he and Senators Burton (Republican) of Ohio, Hatch (Democrat) of New Mexico and Hill (Democrat) of Alabama would demand Senate action. He predicted the action might take the form of a motion to discharge the committee.

While observers believe that any motion to discharge the committee would fail, way would be opened up by this means for Senate discussion of postwar plans, an eventuality Chairman Connally (Democrat) of Texas has been seeking to avoid.

What effect the nonpartisan demand may have on the deliberations of the subcommitee, which has had some dozen postwar resolutions before it for many months, could not be predicted.

There are indications that the Fulbright resolution will be pigeonholed in favor of one expressing committee sentiment which will probably be introduced by Chairman Connally. Some days ago Connally revealed that he did not expect to introduce any postwar resolution until after the proposed tripartite conferences of the United States, Great Britain and Russia.

Connally's Stand

Connally already has gone on record as stating that he believed the international police force proposed in the Ball-Burton-Hatch-Hill, the so-called B2 H2 resolution, is impractical.

The B2 H2 bloc asserts that it would strength the hand of this Government were the resolution passed before the conferences, and points out that the debate has to come sometime, and it might as well be now.

Meanwhile speculation increased as to whether the Foreign Relations Committee will be represetned at either the Moscow conference of Allied foreign ministers or the Algiers conferences of representatives of the three nations.

No official souce would hazard a guess as to whether a committee member would be sent, although Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat) of Utah has said he believes that a member certainly should go.

French Defense Head Named; Giraud's Power Is Curtailed

By the Associated Press

Algiers, Sept. 28.—The French National Committee today named Gen. Paul le Gentilhomme a De Gaullist commissioner of national defense and in effect deprived Gen. Henri Giraud of exclusive control of French troops, except those actually engaged in military operations.

In a surprise move designed to prevent a repetition of the Corsican invasion incident, the committee divided French forces into "two categories."

The first category consists of troops placed under Giraud, French military commander in chief, to be used for operations. The committee announced that troops in the second category were placed "under the direct authority of the Commissioner of National Defense."

How the committee's restriction on Giraud's authority will be received by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied commander in chief in the Mediterranean theater, remains to be seen. Eisenhower several months ago announced that he was insisting that Giraud be left in command of French troops in North Africa. Up to now, military authority in the French set-up had been represented by Giraud.

Gentilhomme, since last July has borne the title of Assistant Commissioner of National Defense.

His elevation to War Minister today was a surprise, as Adrian Tixier, one-armed World War veteran and labor commissioner, had been described by persons close to the committee as the only one acceptable to both Giraud and de Gaulle for the post.

The agitation for appointment of a War Minister was provoked when Giraud carried out the invasion of Corsica without informing the national committee or the smaller committee of national defense headed by de Gaulle. De Gaulle then renewed and enlarged his demands for the designation of a civilian War Minister.

[The New York Herald-Tribune in a copyright article from Algiers reported that General Giraud flatly refused to sign a decree naming a civilian as defense minister and prevailed upon the committee to appoint a soldier. Although the group stood 13 to 2 for the naming of a civilian, according to this version, Giraud was adamant, and because the decree required his signature the committee members wavered and appointed General de Gentilhomme.—Editor's Note.]

The committee also announced the appointment of Henri Hoppenot, who has been in Washington for some time, as delegate of the committee to the United States.

Appointment of Hoppenot, formerly chief of the Quai d'Orsay's European section, was viewed as a concession to Giraud and Giraudist sentiment in the United States and also as recognition of Hoppenot's handling of the troublesome Martinique question.

Navy Not to Send WAVES Overseas

By the Associated Press

The WAVES are not going overseas, at least not soon.

The Navy acceded to strong Senate pressure yesterday and dropped its support of legislation which would have permitted such assignments for its women.

The WACS, Army counterpart of the WAVES, are bound by no stay-at-home rule.

Senate Committee Wants Cafe Rules Injected in Code

Recommendations for simplification of the McCarran restaurant sanitation bill by directing Commissioners to grade District eating establishments and by empowering the Public Health Service to inspect Federal lunchrooms was voted yesterday by a subcommittee of the Senate District Committee.

Chairman Overton (Democrat) of Louisiana announced the substitute bill will be accompanied by a report suggesting the Commissioners make changes in the present sanitation code.

The new version will increase the penalty of violations of the code from $300 to $1000, will direct the Commissioners to adopt a grading system, and will require restaurants in Federal buildings meet District sanitary standards.

Commissioner John Russell Young testified he felt it would be more advisable to make changes needed in the municipal code rather than have the rules made into an act of Congress.

Archbishop Quits Moscow

New York, Sept. 28 (INS).—The British radio reported tonight that the Archbishop of York has left Moscow after a nine-day visit. The broadcast, heard by NBC, said the archbishop was seen off by dignitaries and leaders of the Russian Orthodox Church.

Lend-Lease Aid Reaches New High

President Roosevelt announced yesterday that lend-lease aid to the Allies reached a new peak in August—$1,261,000,000, as compared with $1,050,000,000 in July. Total aid since the lend-lease program began August 31, 1941, was placed at $15,235,000,000, including $13,016,000,000 in goods transferred and $2,219,000,000 in services rendered.

Munitions transferred during August for use against Germany and Japan amounted to 872 million dollars as against 782 million dollars in July; industrial items 152 million dollars against 158 million dollars and foodstuffs 90 million dollars against 132 million dollars.

B. & L. Units To Close 6:30 On Thursdays

By S. Oliver Goodman

Later hours on Thursdays, starting October 7, were approved yesterday by member associations of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League.

In line with similar action by Washington banks the loan groups will remain open until 6:30 p. m. on Thursdays. However, the banks will inaugurate the evening hours tomorrow while the loan associations will start a week later.

The practice of both banks and loan groups of remaining open late on the four Government paydays a month will be discontinued.

Following discussion of the new hours, loan league members meeting yesterday in the Mayflower Hotel heard Clarence E. Kefauver's report on the recent Chicago meeting of the postwar planning committee of the U. S. Savings and Loan League.

Wilfred H. Blanz, presiding at the session here, appointed a nominating committee to select a slate for the local league's annual election of officers and directors on October 26. The committee includes R. E. Buckley, chairman; Edward L. McAleer and E. X. Jones.

Two C. & O. Aides Resign

Two high-ranking members of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad's legal staff, Robert B. Tunstall and Thomas L. Preston, have severed their connections with that road.

Mr. Tunstall, who left a law practice in Norfolk in 1927 to come to Richmond to join the C. & O. legal staff, was made general counsel of the road in 1935 and later vice president in charge of law. Cleveland dispatches said he had not been connected with the company since the August meeting of the board of directors.

Mr. Preston, general solicitor in Richmond, has resigned, effective October 1, to join the legal staff of the Seaboard Air Line Railroad.

It was understood at Cleveland that Robert W. Purcell of that city had been named by C. & O. directors this week to serve as acting general counsel, with the vice presidency in charge of law remaining vice president.

Bendix Aviation Sales Double in 9 Months

Manufacture of aviation products by the Bendix Aviation Corp. in the first nine months of the current fiscal year was at an annual rate almost 50 times that of the calendar year 1938, Ernest R. Breech, president, revealed yesterday.

Sales of $643,148,412, compared with $297,690,090 for the first nine months of the previous fiscal year. Earnings, after provision for Federal taxes and price adjustments under the renegotiation law were $11,995,931.44, compared with net earnings after provisions for Federal taxes but not for price adjustments of $11,035,022.31 for the corresponding period of last year. Unfilled orders at June 30 were $1,042,431,000, despite sharply increased deliveries.

Furniture Makers Turn Down Orders

The month of August saw the sharpest decline since February in new orders accepted by Grand Rapids furniture manufacturers, Seidman & Seidman, accountants for the industry, reported.

Volume of new business last month—36 per cent under that for July—dropped to the August, 1939, level, the report said, with manufacturers voluntarily turning away orders to keep production schedules within restricted bounds of material and manpower.

Cunard Steamship Co. To Enter Air Field

Stockholders of the Cunard Steamship Co., major transatlantic line, voted to amend the company's articles of incorporation to permit operation of air transport service.

The change places directors in a position to build, buy or charter planes to put Cunard into competition for postwar air routes.

Cunard White Star Co., a subsidiary of Cunard, already had been granted stockholder permission to engage in air service.

U. S. Workers To Discuss Postwar Jobs

Employment problems of Federal employes after the war, when, according to authoritative Government sources, two out of three will lose their jobs, will be discussed tomorrow night, September 30, at 6:30 p. m., at a dinner meeting of the Society for Personnel Administration.

Personnel counselors for the Government agencies in Washington will attend the meeting, at which discussion will center also on problems concerned with demobilization of men and women from the armed forces, the shift of war industry workers to peacetime activity, and possible widespread postwar unemployment.

One of the present difficulties to be faced from continuing expansion of Government agencies, a society spokesman said yesterday, is need for personnel technicians in the coming year. To help meet this need, it was learned, the society plans to set up "technical sections" where advice to Government personnel workers will be given in administration, classification, employe relations, placement and training problems.

Dr. Donald Davenport, chief of the employment and occupational outlook branch, Bureau of Labor Statistics, will address the meeting tomorrow night on "Problems of Postwar Readjustment."

Dot, Dot, Dot, Dash

Bristol, Va. (AP).—Neighbors wondered why Mrs. I. M. Travis guarded the peculiar white insect she discovered while working at her home. Now, they know. The insect has a "V" on its back—a sign of "victory."

Ringside Table

By Mary Harris

THE NEW CHATEAU INTERNATIONALE soon will open on the third floor of the Old New Orleans with Sasha Lucas, one of Washington's best-loved maestros, directing a new orchestra which he is now assembling. Gerald Gerry, manager of the Old New Orleans, is pushing decoratitve work on the Shateau Internationale, adding cloakrooms and other conveniences. The formal opening is due about October 15.

The Balalaika will present a new Russian revue about the middle of next week. There'll be a Venetian skit complicated by American soldiers and flirtation, also a Russian harvest home festival.

RUBY FOO'S will open their second floor about the last of October, feature either dancing or entertainment, probably the latter. There's no problem of decoration here, since the spot is already beautifully done in cream and chartreuse with a golden statue of the Chinese Goddess of Laughter dominating the picture.

SURE THING WAGNER. Joe E. Lewis, the Troika's comic star, dined with Owner Joe Moss of Restaurant "400" the other night, flipped out a $50 bill and said to the waitress, "Bet the change on the Allies to win—right on the nose." He meant he'd take the change in War Bonds. But the lass reported back like this, "I've looked and looked but there's no such horse in the entries, Mr. Lewis."

Four Lotus Dancettes went down like 10 pins at the first show on Monday when a big dancing circle whirled so fast it snapped. No serious damage beyond a couple of picturesque bruises.

A MARIMBA MASTER is Louis Betancourt, whose orchestra is keeping La Conga a-throb with rumbas, sambas and such. Louis and his marimba were featured in "Tropic Holiday" with Dorothy Lamour, "South American Way" with Carmen Miranda and "The Marines Fly High" with Lucille Ball.

A BOY—AT LAST. Rocco Terrone's band at Treasure Island knows how Eddie Cantor feels about having all those girl children. Louis Terrone, Rocco's brother, and Violinist Vincent Padula, both recently became the papas of baby girls. Bassist Angie Liotta broke the feminine spell last week by rating a baby boy as a bundle from Heaven.

Singer Bob Preble of Paul Young's, now on crutches after an auto accident, is embarrassed by the kind strangers who think he's a wounded hero. "Where is your Purple Heart?" one of 'em asked him the other eve.

KEYBOARD DREAMERS. A perfect relaxation recipe for many people involves sitting quietly in a corner while a softly played piano seems to think aloud, to explore musical moods and patter prettily in the ad-lib manner . . . To those we'd recommend Bob Brewer at the King Cole Room as he roves through "Cabin in the Sky" . . . Or pretty Kay Arden of the Neptune Room, who thinks it's tiresome to ever play any selection in the same way. The Lounge Riviera boasts two fine interpreters of piano interludes—Tommy Johnson at the afternoon cocktail hour, Eddy Whitesell with Pete Macias' band at the supper dance . . . Myles Hallett plays a beguiling piano at the afternoon cocktail hour at Cafe Caprice . . . At Restaurant "823" the classic and skillful Heintze Brothers have been treating masterpieces kindly for five or six years, accumulated a tremendous following . . . Hi Hat's Jack Neal rolls out piano harmonies with tremendous vigor and dexterity . . . Jerry King of the Anchor Room makes a piano sit up and say "Uncle!" . . . Kenny Hildebrandt played Liszt's "Hungarian Rhapsody No. 5" with lovely brilliance the last time we visited Crossroads . . . And we suppose you've heard that a young fellow named Carmen Cavallero, now at the Statler, is quite a pianist.

At Del Rio the other night was Harris Sachs, young aviator brother of Herbie Sachs. Harris has just learned to fly a Liberator, will soon be on his way to the Pacific war theater . . . This reminds that the last bulletin from Priscilla Naecker, former publicist for the Wardman Park and Carlton Hotels, said she'd enjoyed the Army-Navy football game in Australia. Pris is now with the Red Cross.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Department of Letters

Bill Burnett used to be a sports writer on The Post staff, until he joined the Marines. He writes now of the tribulations of a sports-writer on Guadalcanal:

"Guadalcanal, Sept. 8 (Delayed)—American civilization has done a lot for Guadalcanal since the Marines landed and relieved the Japs of command. You can't help noticing it. Yet one of civilization's pet occupations—sports writing—has yet to thrive here.

POVICH

"Not that there isn't plenty of material. The Marines lean heavily on sports, what time they aren't on maneuvers, building roads, playing nurse-maid to half-tracks, etc. . . . You run upon a couple of young giants, stripped to the waist and all alone in the jungle, merrily pummeling one another as if the Golden Gloves title hinged on the result. Or you find that regular leagues, complete with official rules, are operating in baseball, softball, horseshoes and even chess.

"But the place can't accommodate a full-time sports writer in the manner to which he's accustomed. There isn't a glassed-in pressbox on the island, no Ebbetts Field bars under the grandstand where overworked reporters can relax. In fact, no grandstands.

"". . . If there is a sports writer back home who thinks of staking out a claim here, don't do it. Take it from one who knows, you wouldn't like it here. Part of the things you would undergo are:

"You would ride to your assignment through suffocating dust, hanging on with everything but your teeth to a truck that finds every hole in the road and makes the most of it.

"From your press bench (probably a dehydrated potato can), you would have to sort the players and teams in your own mind. That is a little difficult because all of them dress—or undress alike . . . during the game you would sweat. Griffith Stadium in July is an Antarctic plunge compared to this. And you would fight off insects ranging from the malaria-bearing mosquito to the pugnacious praying mantis.

"To relieve the monotony you might join members of both teams in a nearby ditch while Jap planes made one of their flights over the island. If you survived all this, the rest would be easy. There would be the cool shower supplied by the home team and the free food and beer. These are as customary as the heat and insects.

"Still, this is no place for a confirmed sports writer. As the Marines would put it, it's still 'too rugged'."

Dear Bill, so you think you have it tough writing sports down there on Guadalcanal. Fact is, you're in the luxury league. How would you like to put up with all that we have to go through, covering next week's World Series, for example. Now that's going to be rugged.

The first thing you have to do to cover a World Series is to take a couple of hundred bucks of the office's money. Now you know how that hurts. Then you reach for a phone to make a train reservation, and in these times you're apt to get a busy signal for five minutes. It's downright annoying, I want to tell you.

You may have to wait as long as three minutes for a cab to the station, too, and then you have to share it. You have no idea of what we go through. Then you sit for four hours on a Pullman with the upholstery probably frayed, and the air-conditioning only 30 degrees cooler than the street. It's hell.

Your hotel room is apt to have only two exposures, and in the dining room there's be two meatless days a week. You have to get along on shrimps, lobsters, chicken, turkey and other unrationed items like pheasant. And the prices are enough to defeat even your expense-account arithmetic unless you really bear down on it.

Getting into that Yankee Stadium press box is no breeze, either. The elevator services takes you only half way up, and from there you lug yourself and a 16-pound typewriter almost 40 feet up the ramp and are so tuckered you have to drop into the press-room bar and flop in an armchair. Table service in the bar is a war casualty. You get no refreshments unless you get up and cross the room. It's pretty rugged, all right.

It's pretty tortuous sitting there in the press box watching a World Series game for a couple of hours. There's no place to put your feet in the crowded quarters, and you never know which day to bring your topcoat. When the game is over everybody can go home except we wretches who have to start pounding our typewriters for an hour. It leaves you pretty well fagged, I can tell you, and the next day it's the same tough grind all over again. For some reason they start these World Series games at 1:30 p. m., which means you're late for work unless you're up at the crack of noon. Yrs. in sport. S. P.

Riders, Indians Top Schoolboy Grid Card

The District area high and prep school football pot, which started mmering nicely last weekend with two upsets and several games which ran according to predicted form, will come to a boil Friday and Saturday as all of the area teams get into play.

Top contest of the week goes to Anacostia and Roosevelt, which, on the basis of their performance last Friday, take the feature spot of the program in a game at Central stadium Saturday.

The other two interhigh contests will be played between Wilson and Central at Central and Coolidge and Tech at Tech.

Western will take on the always strong Washington and Lee High in Arlington on Saturday and Eastern will play Episcopal High in Alexandria on Friday. George Washington High in Alexandria will meet St. John's in the other across-the-river game under the lights on Saturday night, while Gonzaga will journey to Baltimore for a triangle with the highly-touted Mount St. Joseph's team on Sunday. Devitt will take a still longer trip to Staunton, Va., for a Saturday game with Staunton Military Academy.

No Shining Light

In the high school melange there is, to date, no standout.

Roosevelt, on the basis of its decisive defeat of Eastern last week, looks good. But so does Anacostia, which pulled the surprise of the week in defeating Central, not only in the score but in the statistics as well. Zuzu Stewart at Anacostia hopes his boys will be playing the same enthusiastic brand of football that surprised the daylights out of Central.

Coolidge beat Wilson last week but Coach Gil Conn isn't looking for an easy win over Tech. He's worried—plenty worried—about the way his boys are appearing in practice. They're too confident. Tech, meanwhile, can't be underrated, in the opinion of Coach Fred Mulvey, whose Western eleven handed the Trainers a 6-2 defeat.

And then there's Central, highly-touted until its drubbing by the Southeast boys. Coach Jankowski allows as how he has a renovated ball club. But Wilson can't be sold short, either. The heavy Chevy Chase line has been working hard this week and the defeat by Coolidge rankles.

Over in Arlington Western meets the redoubtable Generals and though the Raiders aren't too happy about their prospects, they're going across the river with better chances of winning than they've had in several years—despite the fact that W. and L. whipped the pants off those well-pantalooned Bullis boys last week.

Not too much is know so far about Episcopal High, and Eastern stands a good chance of taking the Alexandria game. Also untried is the St. John's eleven, which faces George Washington High in Alexandria Saturday night. The Alexandrians took something of a lacing from Thomas Jefferson of Richmond last Saturday, but that was a matter of being outclassed.

Gonzaga has a job on its hands this weekend with Mount St. Joseph's, but Coach "Bo" Richards likes that green squad of his. Right now there's a swell scrap between Miller and MacGregor for the center spot and another between Zanger and Hickson for a backfield position.

Untried Devitt is pretty confident about that Staunton game, for among other nice players it has Bob Coombs at fullback, who passes, runs and kicks. Coach Len Askin is using a double wingback formation.

Nats and Indians Battle for 2d Place Tonight

An open date on the schedule did not mean the Nats were idle yesterday as they answered the desperate call of Virginia apple growers to pick the fruit from the trees and help save the crop. On the Chilcott Orchard, near Vienna, Va. (left to right), Coach Benny Bengough, Manager Ossie Bluege, Coach Nick Altrock, Jake Powell, Dutch Leonard, Coach Clyde Milan and Mickel Haefner trudge in with their sacks full

Star Hurlers See Action in Double Bill

Twin Win Would Assure Nats Tie; Niggeling and Wynn Or Haefner Pitch

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

It's a showdown, starting today, between the Nats and the Cleveland Indians in their struggle for second place and the $400 more it means per player from the World Series split. The two clubs are commencing a three-game series with a twilight-night double header at Griffith Stadium.

Second-place shares will be worth approximately $1200 to each player this year, with third place shares estimated at $800 each, and the two teams are in a mood to play their very best.

The Indians did themselves a heap of good yesterday by beating the Yankees and narrowing the Nats' grip on second place to 2½ games, revising their standings to read:

	Won	Lost	G.B.	G.P.
Washington	82	67	—	5
Cleveland	79	69	2½	6

The Nats are in a position to clinch at least a tie for second place tonight. A double victory would achieve it, even if the Indians won all of their remaining games thereafter.

Use Mound Aces

For tonight's battles, Manager Ossie Bluege and Lou Boudreau have reserved their pitching aces. Bluege will toss Johnny Niggeling and either Mickey Haefner or Early Wynn at the Indians. Boudreau will counter with Jim Bagby and the fast-balling Allie Reynolds.

Niggeling is the greatest guarantee that Washington will win at least one game. He has never allowed more than two runs in his five starts for the Nats, and he has won three games by shut-outs.

The Nats will be operating again without the services of George Case who is still hobbled by a painfully bruised thigh and is at a standstill in his base-stealing battle with Wally Moses, of the White Sox.

Outfielder Jake Powell, too, is nursing a leg injury, suffered when hit by a foul ball off his own bat last night, but he is expected to play in at least one of the games tonight.

Lost 5 of 7 Games

The Nats have not been rising toward second place of late, incidentally. Their gait has more nearly resembled a stumble, what with five defeats in their last seven games, due chiefly to a lack of hitting.

Washington has been getting a helpful assist, however, from the Yankees, who slapped down the Indians three games in a row before yesterday. The Cleveland club has been strengthened by the return to its line-up of Ken Keltner after a month's absence with an injured leg.

The Nats and Indians will conclude their affairs against each other with a single game on Thursday night. Thus far this season Washington has lost 11 and won 8 games against the Indians.

Cards Buy Infielder

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 28 (AP).—The Columbus Red Birds of the American Association announced today the sale of Emil Verban, second baseman who was the only member of the club to play in every game this season, to the parent St. Louis Cardinal club. Verban hit for a .257 average this year.

Reds Assured Second, Beat Phils, 4-3, 2-0

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Sept. 28.—The Cincinnati Reds assured themselves second place in the National League today by handing the Philadelphia Phillies a double spanking, 4 to 3 and 2 to 0, in which they marked their eighth and ninth straight victories in a row.

The Brooklyn Dodgers dropped from the race for second place by losing a double bill to the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Terp Backfield Shifted by Spears

Following a one-day layoff from scrimmage, contact work was resumed for the University of Maryland football squad yesterday as it began to prep for the Wake Forest game coming up next Saturday at College Park.

In an effort to get more speed and better passing out of the team, which dropped a 13-to-7 contest to the Curtis Bay Coast Guard eleven Saturday, Dr. Clarence Spears, coach of the Old Liners, shifted some of the starting backfield around.

Navy Tickets on Sale

Tickets for the Navy-Cornell football game to be played Saturday night at Baltimore Municipal Stadium are on sale at the ticket bureau of the local AAA Automobile Club, 17th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw. The ticket bureau will be open this week from 8 a. m. to 7 p. m. Tickets will be sold on a first-come first-served basis. Seats available at the AAA are on the 25 to 40-yard line.

Old Ear Injury Causes Army to Reject Dizzy Dean

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 28.—Dizzy Dean, baseball's gift to radio, was rejected for military service at Jefferson Barracks today because of a perforated eardrum.

DEAN

The one-time star pitcher, now a play-by-play broadcaster, suffered the ear injury several years ago.

The transfer papers of Alpha Brazle, St. Louis Cardinals' rookie southpaw, failed to arrive from his Cortez, Colo., draft board and Brazle's appearance at the barracks for an induction examination was postponed.

Williams' Eyes Bad, Released By Redskins

Ted Williams, who was purchased from the Philadelphia Eagles two weeks ago to give the Redskins another broken field threat, was given his release yesterday at his own suggestion. Williams was the nineteenth player to leave the squad this year for one reason or another and left the 'Skins with a maximum of 28 players.

Williams explained he had been troubled with defective vision of late and in his present condition was no help to the team. He underwent an examination yesterday afternoon and it was proven he did not have proper vision for more than six feet.

Williams played with the Eagles last year after a brilliant college career at Boston College. He had not signed with the Phil-Pitt combination this year but he immediately signed with the Redskins. Whether the Redskins will be stuck for purchase price on the deal was not known. They filed all particulars with the Philadelphia team yesterday.

Stolen Base—Actually—Holds Up Ball Game

Lancaster, Pa., Sept. 28 (AP).—A stolen base in the championship play-off of the Interstate Baseball League held up the game 20 minutes last night—while the umpire looked for a new keystone sack.

Midway in the game between the Lancaster Red Roses and the York White Roses, air-raid sirens signaled a practice blackout. When the lights went on, second base was gone—stolen.

Lancaster won the game and title, 6-5

Cards Split With Braves, Win 100th

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 28 (AP).—Mort Cooper, the Cardinals' ace pitcher, was far from World Series form today and was battered from the mound by the Boston Braves in the first game of a doubleheader which the Braves won 6 to 5 in 13 innings. The Redbirds scored their 100th victory of the season by taking the nightcap 7 to 1.

Cooper lasted only five innings, giving up six hits, five bases on balls and four runs before Harry Brecheen relieved him.

Tommy Holmes singled with the bases full in the 13th to drive home a pair of scores and a Cardinal rally in the bottom of 13th managed only one run.

Max Lanier was in top form in winning the afterpiece. He allowed only six hits and not a single walk. Marty Marion and Lou Klein each drove in three runs.

Columbus, O., Sept. 28 (AP).—Josh Gipson's home run with the bases loaded in the seventh inning helped the Birmingham (Ala.) Black Barons defeat the Washington Homestead Grays, 11 to 10, tonight in the Negro "World Series." Birmingham's triumph evened the series at two games each. The next game will be played tomorrow night at Indianapolis, Ind.

Musial Assured N. L. Batting Title

New York, Sept. 28 (AP).—With the baseball season nearing the final curtain there no longer is any possible doubt of Stan Musial gaining the National League batting championship.

The sturdy St. Louis slugger had an average of .358 before Tuesday's games and a 28-point margin over his closest rival, Billy Herman of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Behind Musial the leading hitters were Herman with .330; Mickey Witek, New York .321; Bob Elliott, Pittsburgh .317; Walker Cooper, St. Louis .317; Bill Nicholson, Chicago .309; Frank McCormick, Cincinnati .303; Arky Vaughan, Brooklyn .301; Dixie Walker, Brooklyn .296; and Frank Gustine, Pittsburgh .293.

Harry Jeffra Scores

Indians Lace Breuer To Beat Yanks, 11-3

New York Hurler Fails World Series Test; Mel Harder Drives in 3 Runs, Helps Himself

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 28.—Marvin Breuer flunked his World Series test for the New York Yankees today as the Cleveland Indians closed out their 1943 rivalry with the American League champs by bagging an 11-to-3 victory.

Breuer, who had not started a game all season for the Yanks and had pitched just 10 innings in relief, was given a chance to start so Manager Joe McCarthy could calculate his availability for duty against the St. Louis Cardinals next week.

The outing indicated Breuer's labor in the series would be confined to fungo hitting before the games. He gave up nine hits before being lifted with none out in the fifth inning after the Indians had scored one run in the second, five in the fourth and started on another five-run flurry in the fifth.

Mel Harder, who hit a triple and a single and drove in three runs to help nail the 197th victory of his career, coasted along with a 10-hit performance. One of the blows was Joe Gordon's fifteenth home run and the ninety-seventh of the year for the Yankees.

Bonika Wrestles La Chappelle at Turner's Tonight

Maurice LaChappelle, known as the Flying Frenchman, and Dr. John Bonika, the Boston Sawbone, are the headliners on tonight's wrestling show at Turner's Arena. They're down for a finish bout.

A roughhouse battle is expected in the semiwindup in which Cowboy Luttrell, the Texas villain, collides with Abe Stein of New York. Luttrell was disqualified last week in a feature match with Babe Sharkey and is back to force Sharkey into a return match.

Johnny Long, the Baltimore shipyard worker, will tackle John Melas of Florida; Babe Sharkey will oppose Tom George, a Greek matman, while Dick Craddock, Washington product, will open the show in a bout against Jim Stefano of Philadelphia at 8:45.

Gerry Weible Wins Women's Class A Cup Play After Tie

Mrs. Godfrey In Deadlock At Net 77

Mrs. Halloran's 79 Lowest Gross Total But Official Ruling Disallows Score

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

Gerry Weible, the 22-year-old girl golfer, who aspires to be a school teacher, won the NBC Cup tournament yesterday at Washington Golf and Country Club, the Kenwood player's second Class A cup triumph in three weeks.

Miss Weible won over the largest field of the season but it was close as the winner's score of 89-12, 77, was tied by Mrs. John Godfrey, Congressional, who had 87-10, 77, in her third round of golf in a year but lost out by matching cards.

With most of the field reported Miss Weible's mother, Mrs. Walter L. Weible, the DWGA president, was low for the day with one of her best rounds, 96-18 78, but along came daughter Gerry to top her mother's score by a stroke and then Mrs. Godfrey, last player to finish, tried hard for an 8-foot putt on the last hole but missed and dropped into a temporary tie.

Confusion Covers Awards

The association officials ran into confusion in awarding the low gross prize but there was no doubt as to who posted the best score. The honor went to a comparative newcomer, Mr. F. J. Halloran, an 11-time club champion in New York and Connecticut and 10-time qualifier for the women's national.

Mrs. Halloran, also of Kenwood, one of the principal stockholders of the New York Yankees, played the course in 39-40, 79, but the rules committee, in an extremely complicated ruling, announced she could not compete for low gross because she had not reported five outside net scores. That left Mrs. Betty Meckley as "official" low gross scorer with an 84.

More than $100 in war bonds and stamps were included as prizes with Miss Weible winning a $25 bond. Gerry ran into trouble with a big six on the par 3 second, but she was consistent from that point with nines of 46 and 43. Mrs. Godfrey was off to an excellent start on both nines, par-birdie on the first and birdie-par on the second, but she was erratic from lack of play. Mrs. Weible had three sixes on par 3 holes which hurt her score.

Mrs. Wise Wins

Fourth low net went to Mrs. William Wise, the long hitter from Kenwood, whose back nine of 40 in an 86, 7—79 was one of the best of the day. Mrs. Alexander Cushing, Army and Navy's Post and Star Cup champion, was next with another 86, 7—79, followed by Mrs. A. C. Minnix, Columbia, 93, 14—79.

Five ties at net 80 were decided in the following order by matching cards: Mrs. W. M. Falls, Columbia, 88, 8—80; Mrs. J. F. Gross, Columbia, 92, 12—80; Mrs. F. W. Evans, Kenwood, 89, 9—80; Mrs. H. H. Goodman, Washington, 97, 17—80, and Mrs. H. A. Knox, three-time president of the association, 94, 14—80.

The event concluded the season for the low handicap players. Next event will be the postponed Times Herald Class B Cup play Friday at Kenwood and by invitation only the President's Plate will conclude the season October 12 at Kenwood.

Low Scorers All in Women Golfers' Record Turnout

Below—Gerry Weible (left), winner of the NBC women's golf cup yesterday at Washington Golf and Country Club, signifies with a finger the one stroke she beat her mother, Mrs. W. L. Weible (center) and Mrs. J. W. Godfrey (right), who lost, 1 down, in the matching cards after Miss Weible and Mrs. Godfrey tied. Right—Mrs. F. J. Halloran, low scorer of the day with a 79 although she was ruled out of the prize list on a technicality.

Somewhere South of Chungking!

"The most beautiful girl I've ever seen was a nurse in Butte, Montana."

Sixteen thousand miles from Butte, Montana, in the cabin of a troop and cargo transport, they're talking today as casually as this . . . scarcely even aware of what it means.

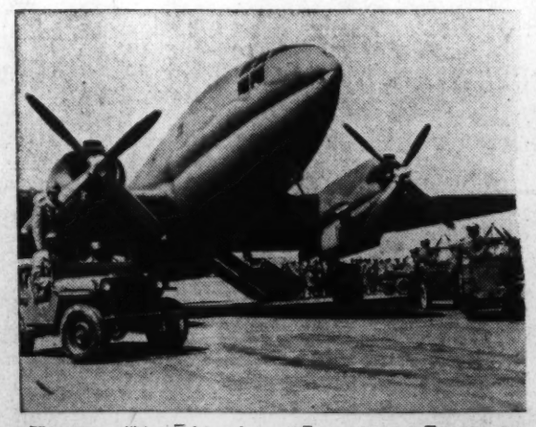
It means that hundreds of far-away places, unknown or inaccessible wilderness a few months ago, are "whistle-stops" today on the military routes of the United Nations . . . It means that tons of military cargoes and increasing thousands of our fighting men are daily shuttling through the sky, meeting the greatest challenge of our time with an achievement by America's aviation industry — its airlines and manufacturers; an achievement that even now only a few people are aware of.

Such is the story of our new logistical weapon, the cargo and troop transport, which is today at the top of the priority list alongside the four-engine bomber. And one of the busiest of these is the famous Curtiss COMMANDO, in service throughout the world, aiding the gigantic task of our Air Transport Command.

Today this freighter of the sky is helping to meet one of the greatest of all our military needs — speed and flexibility in the transportation of troops and vital war materials, out at the end of our supply lines.

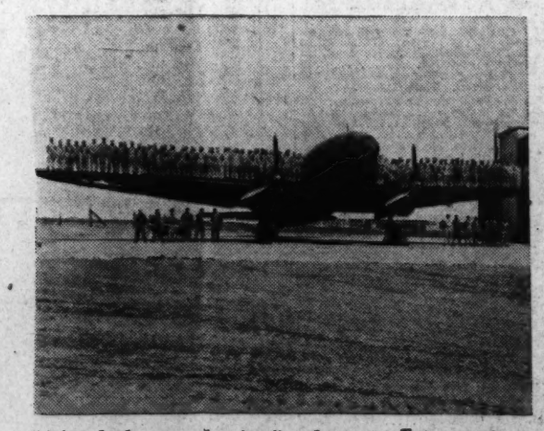
And little does the American lad dream — in the clouds above Chungking — that after the war is over, his girl in Butte, Montana, will be living on the "main line" from Fort Worth to Shanghai, in the air trade routes that are being established today by global war.

For a whole new age of air transportation has been born of war. It is real, it is here. This war is still far from won, but it will be won. And already the greatest peacetime era in history is the legacy to American men and women who are working, fighting, sacrificing for a better world . . . LOOK TO THE SKY, AMERICA!



Known as "Troopship of the Sky," and "Flying Arsenal" — now winning new laurels on the invasion front . . . the C-46 Commando carries troops, jeeps, artillery, ammunition, supplies. Speed and capacity — military secret.

Commandos recently made a record 15,000 mile mass flight from the United States to a foreign base on what the Air Force experts enthusiastically termed "the biggest and longest flight in transport history."



"A hundred men and a giant" — dramatizing the 108-foot wing span of the Curtiss-Wright C-46 Commando, world's largest twin-engine plane. Described in recent OWI Transport Report as "the most efficient of its type."

Like Meets Like

Coeur d'Alene, Idaho.—Sheriff's Deputy Cliff Johnson was called to a lonely, one-way country road at 6 a. m., and found two motorists sitting in their cars glaring at each other. They'd been there 12 hours, said the deputy, each refusing to back up to a wide spot in the road and let the other by.

Perilous Home Front

Temple, Tex.—First Lieut. Arthur C. Madley, jr., returned home from North Africa and found his mother suffering from a cut hand, his father's leg injured in an accident, and his wife with a wrenched ankle. Madley has just completed 50 combat missions without a scratch.

General Accounting To Boost Field Staff

General Accounting Office will greatly expand its field staff. Much authority and few employes will be decentralized. It's the same old story at GAO: It can't get people to come here for the jobs and it can get them in the field. Moreover, GAO wanted to get closer to War and Navy operating units outside of Washington. Four Army audit branches have been established—at New York, Chicago, Atlanta and San Francisco—and each of these will be built up to around 500 employes within the next few weeks. A Navy audit branch will be established in Cleveland shortly, and it's expected to hire 600 employes. The Navy's Bureau of Accounts is located in the same city.

KLUTTZ

GAO also will expand its war contract projects audit section. At the moment this division—made up mainly of cost accountants and CPA's—is operating at 175 different war projects. It now has around 750 employes and it's being enlarged to 1000. The early part of last year GAO didn't have a single employe outside of Washington on permanent assignment and it'll soon have a staff of 3600 and probably many more. The war audit units were installed to bring the agency up to date. GAO routine audits have been running from 18 months to 2 years behind, and by the time errors are detected, very little can often be done about it. The war audit section akays expenditures on the spot. They are and will be located in offices with the Army and Navy, and they should pay their operating costs many times over.

W. Averell Harriman, who is expected to be named Ambassador to Russia, is being credited with persuading the President to choose Edward Stettinius as his Undersecretary of State. . . . A swap shop will be opened in the Pentagon for War Department employes. . . . Betty Jane Singleton, one of the best secretaries in the Quartermaster General's Office, is leaving to join the Marines. . . . Dennis Cooper of War Manpower, will be commissioned in AMG. . . . The executive council of the National Federation of Federal Employes will meet here next week to map out a legislative program. . . . A farewell party for 30 employes of the Relief and Rehabilitation Office who are leaving for overseas assignments. Governor Lehman told his employes that he had an agreement with Leo T. Crowley to permit them to work with him on the United Nations relief conference, to be held November 9, and added that most of them would be kept with the Allied set-up.

The Bailey-Clark bill which would restrict the employment here of able-bodied males between the ages of 18 and 38 is now expected to get Senate approval despite opposition the Army and Navy. To civilians, the bill would mean very little. It merely confirms what is already being done. The bill is aimed at draft-dodgers and there are very, very few of them in the Federal service here despite all the tall talk from Capitol Hill. I don't know of any physically-fit civilian males between the ages of 18 and 38 who are serving at desk jobs here unless: (1) they are in 4-F (2) fathers, or (3) their services have been classified as essential. And if you know of any I'd be pleased to hear about them. The challenge applies to members of Congress, too.

The bill, however, would play hob with officers and enlisted men who are stationed at the War and Navy Departments in desk jobs. Apparently hundreds of them would have to be transferred if the bill became law. The Army has moved out many of its younger officers within the past few months. The Navy plans to replace at least 1000 officers and enlisted men with civilians before the end of this year, but it must first get the civilians, and that's a difficult job and very little progress is being made. As a matter of fact, the bill probably would be in the interest of the civilian employes and it would tend to clear those who try to do a job.

The executive council of the American Federation of Government Employes adopted a legislative program which calls for full time-and-a-half pay; basic pay increases of at least 15 per cent; payment of annual leave to the beneficiary in case of death; protection for employes who transferred to war jobs and job protection for war service appointees to the point where it wouldn't conflict with veterans. The union's postwar plans call for a minimum of $1500 for every full-time Federal worker; optional retirement at full annuity after 30 years' service, and a five-day, 35-hour work week at no cut in salary . . . Civil Service needs student nurses and historical specialists.

Enduring Peace Plea Of Jurist

Judge John Biggs Addresses Federal Bar Group at District Luncheon

Judge John Biggs, jr., of the United States Court of Appeals in Wilmington, Del., yesterday before 450 persons attending a luncheon of the Federal Bar Association urged this Nation work for postwar international cooperation and eliminate the present international "vigilante law."

The meeting was in honor of the senior judges of the 11 United States Circuit Court of Appeals. Present were five members of the United States Court and many other high Government officials.

Judge Biggs discussed isolationism, imperialism, treaties, confederation and union of nations as postwar possibilities for the maintenance of peace.

"We have spilt the blood of our sons in two wars on three continents. We have spent more than 250 billion dollars. The tale is yet to run. The last peace was simply an armistice between two wars. If a lasting peace is not made following this conflagration World War Three will be on our doorstep before our children's children are fully grown."

He then discussed the possibility of a league of nations and the amount of sovereignty it curtailed.

He said, "Our untrammeled isolationism and our unsullied sovereignty were in existence for years and today we find ourselves involved in the greatest war in history and fortunately possessed of alliances with so many governments that most of us cannot even name them all. Our isolationism and our command of complete sovereignty now look like . . . a garment which either didn't fit us very well or was nonexistent.

"The future is in our hands. We may do with it what we will."

Grade School Social Aides Recommended

Social workers for elementary schools were recommended yesterday by the advisory committee on wartime and postwar problems of the child as a means of curbing behavior problems among Washington's children before they become crises.

The committee met to hear a report of its subcommittee on protection and determined to devote another session to the subject after some dissension between school personnel and representatives of social agencies as to how soon cases should be referred outside the school.

Judge Fay L. Bentley told the story of a child who had had 124 absences before his case ever reached Juvenile Court.

Lawson J. Cantrell said cases would run into the hundreds if teachers attempted to refer them before crises occurred. Other educators and teachers and principals handle effectively many cases themselves.

Miss Jessie LaSalle said referrals to other District agencies were often useless since an amazing number of parents refuse to cooperate for their own children's sake. She favored increased services in schools, because she said parents are used to schools and will go there for advice and help when they won't go elsewhere.

Problem child centers in four schools last year were found to operate effectively because they were conveniently located, Miss A. Madorah Donahue of the protective service unit under the Board of Public Welfare reported.

A report on the District's efforts to safeguard the defective, dependent, delinquent, and deficient child from becoming permanent behavoir problems was presented by Acting Superintendent Robert L. Haycock.

Windsors Come To Washington Aboard Pullman

Riding an ordinary Pullman, and without the usual entourage that accompanies royalty, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor last night arrived in Washington for a two-day stay while the duke, who is Governor of the Bahamas, discusses Bahaman affairs with the British Colonial Supplies Liaison.

The couple came from New York, arriving at 9:40, and were whisked immediately to the British Embassy in Embassy cars.

They were met by Sir Ronald Campbell, charge d'affaires of the Embassy, in the absence of the Ambassador; Humphrey Clark, third secretary, and George T. Summerlin of the Division of Protocol, State Department.

The former King and his American-born Duchess spent several days in Boston visiting the Duchess' aunt, Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, who is ill.

OPA Charts Course to Follow If Overcharge Is Suspected

Mrs. Roosevelt signs the Home Front Pledge at the White House while Robert K. Thompson, District OPA director, looks on

The District OPA yesterday released to the public a handbook outlining "all the consumer needs to know about top legal prices in retail stores." Copies are available at local War Price and Rationing Boards.

Four general procedures are suggested where overcharging is "suspected":

1. The consumer should ask the shopkeeper "courteously" if a mistake has been made.

2. If the reply is unsatisfactory, the retailer should be asked for a receipt, which he must then issue.

3. The receipt (or complaint, if one is refused) should be taken to the price clerk of the local board, where it will be reviewed by the price panel.

4. Consumers have the right to file suit in the Small Claims Court for three times the amount of the overcharge, or $50, whichever is greater.

Necessity for restraint and judgment in all cases of suspected price violations is emphasized, however, to prevent uncalled-for claims against shopkeepers.

The home front pledge campaign was officially launched here yesterday, when Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt signed a pledge that she will support price control and the fight against black markets. Robert K. Thompson, District OPA director, took the pledge to the White House for the First Lady's signature.

National Milk Group Head Flays Subsidy

In an attack on Government subsidy of milk production, John Brandt of Minneapolis, Minn., president of the National Cooperative Milk Producers Federation, told 200 members from throughout the Nation yesterday "it is not fair to expect soldiers fighting for $50 a month to pay the consumers' wartime food bill after the war."

He spoke at the Washington Hotel at the opening of a three-day meeting of representatives who have come here to work out a program to increase milk production.

"We've had enough experience with subsidies and the power over the economic life of dairy farmers that subsidies place in the administrative agencies of the Government," Brandt declared.

"There is a growing demand on the part of dairy farmers for price ceiling legislation that will consider cost of production rather than parity and that will give dairy farmers support prices at a new scale of price ceilings," he continued.

Brand also advocated separate rationing of butter instead of grouping it with meats, cheese and other fats. He maintained raising the point value of butter will not solve the present crisis.

Reports given by representatives of the 64 organizations comprising the federation disclosed the dairy situation is particularly acute in the Atlantic Seaboard area and on the Pacific Coast.

It was explained most of the dairying throughout the country is conducted along with other farm activities. When prices of milk are not high enough to favor production, the farmers turn their attention to other work, a situation now sweeping throughout the country, members reported.

It is expected milk producers will formally adopt a resolution today against Government subsidies of milk production and before the meeting closes Thursday, a policy will be worked out as a substitution to be presented to the Government.

Marvin Jones, war food administrator, and Chester Bowles, general manager of the Office of Price Administration, are schedued to speak today.

$5000 in Bonds Sold at Rally

Approximately $5000 in war bonds were purchased at a rally sponsored by 11 public schools in the eastern suburban area of Montgomery County in the Jesup Blair Park, Silver Spring, last night. Sales in the area now total $32,000.

One thousand pupils attended the rally which was addressed by Judge Stedman Prescott of the Montgomery County Circuit Court and by Pvt. Roland Sanner, a soldier injured when his ship was torpedoed in Mediterranean action.

D. C. Uses 50% Less Gas Under Rationing

By Linton Burkett
Post Staff Writer

Despite suspected large black market sales of gasoline, rationing of the fuel has slashed consumption by one-half that of the prerationed period, District gasoline tax figures for August showed yesterday.

The tax figures show that the District consumed 16,645,334 gallons of gasoline in August of 1941; a total of 10,203,871 gallons in August 1942—the first whole month of coupon rationing—and only 8,110,754 gallons in August of this year.

The Petroleum Administration for War meanwhile reported figures showing a total of 10,808,410 gallons of gasoline delivered in August in the entire Washington Terminal Supply area, which includes Alexandria, Arlington, Fairfax, Fauquier, Loudoun and Prince William counties in Virginia and Prince Georges, Montgomery, Charles and St. Marys in Maryland.

Although it is indicated that Washington consumed 80 per cent of the entire area quota, it was said that the counties had also received gasoline from Baltimore and Richmond, which did not show in the Washington figure.

Last month's tax figure was below July consumption of over nine million despite the fact that the pleasure-driving ban was as good as lifted during August.

Any black market sales would be included in the tax figure as this tax is collected by the District from the various oil companies on gasoline they bring into the District. Black market operations take place after the fuel has left the hands of the importing companies.

Locally, the compliance with rationing regulations is believed to be better than 75 per cent, John L. Laskey, OPA enforcement officer, said yesterday. He admitted, however, having encountered some scattered trafficking in illegal coupons. Laskey said that so far they had discovered no instances of counterfeiting of coupons.

Crowd Gathers At Gutter to Drink Moonshine Liquor

Atlanta, Sept. 28 (AP).—Over 200 gallons of "moonshine" corn liquor trickled down a gutter after a police raid on a residence near Oakland Cemetery, but Negro residents salvaged some with pots and pans and a few dropped to hands and knees to collect the liquid without aid of utensils.

State Revenue Department agents and police found the whisky cached in a clothes closet. A sizable crowd gathered and as the fiery stuff was poured out spectators pushed and shoved their way to the gutter with coffee cups, glasses, dippers, pots and pans. Most of them consumed the liquor on the spot.

Jury Scolds D. C. for Lack Of Crossings

Body Says Traffic Authorities Have Failed to Provide Enough Crosswalks

D. C. traffic deaths this year . 62
Deaths this date last year .. 74
District total last year 108

A coroner's jury hearing two traffic death cases yesterday criticized District traffic authorities for failing to provide pedestrian crosswalks at Sherman and Florida aves. nw., scene of one fatality, and recommended that "traffic lights at this intersection not be operated until this condition is rectified."

Informed of the recommendation last night, William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic, promised an immediate investigation. He gave assurance that the crosswalk lines will be painted "as soon as possible."

"The Traffic Department's sign shop," Van Duzer explained, "is short-handed and the painters have been concentrating on crosswalks for school children." Crosswalks in the vicinity of schools still must be provided in about a precinct and half, he said.

Driver Exonerated

The death of William Tittensor, 80, of 4611 14th st. nw., prompted the jury's recommendation. He was struck and killed at the intersection Sunday night, by an automobile operated by James W. Buckner, 38, of 6200 31st st. nw. Buckner was exonerated.

Testimony revealed the victim was crossing Florida ave. from north to south in the imaginary crosswalk, but was not protected by traffic signals. Both north and south bound traffic was allowed to move through the Y-shaped intersection, it was said. The recommendation said:

"We recommend that the authorities having charge of the placing of traffic control lights on the streets of the District give immediate attention to the intersection of Florida and Sherman aves. nw., where lights were installed September 24.

"We have found in hearing circumstances surrounding the death of William Tittensor at this intersection that no crosswalks have been painted in and the lights as they are now functioning do not give the pedestrian an opportunity to cross in safety in any direction on a green light.

Pedestrian First

"Therefore we recommend that pedestrian's life and rights be the first consideration when traffic control lights are installed and that the second consideration be the flow of traffic.

"We further recommend that these traffic lights not be operated until this condition at this intersection be rectified."

At an earlier inquest, the jury also exonerated Earl E. Gosnell, 51, of Falls Church, Va., in connection with the death of Daniel Harrington, 87, of 4440 MacArthur blvd. nw.

Harrington was knocked down crossing the boulevard in front of his home, September 7, and died at Georgetown Hospital September 19. The jury ruled his death to be "accidental."

War-Related Prosecutions Are Doubled

The administrative office of the United States Courts reported yesterday that during the last year prosecutions for violation of the Selective Service Act and sedition statutes doubled and nearly trebled for illegal use of the military uniform.

Locally the District Court speeded up the processes of civil litigation more than 100 per cent in the last two years. It now takes an average of five months to complete a case from the date of filing, while two years ago it took more than 11 months.

Director Henry P. Chandler, administrator of the courts, reported that in general the volume of usual peacetime types of litigation has decreased, but cases related to war have markedly increased. Private civil cases dropped 16 per cent, prosecutions for violation of liquor laws 57 per cent, narcotic cases 22 per cent and the theft of automobiles between States 35 per cent. Bankruptcy proceedings dropped from 52,000 to 35,000.

Government civil cases rose 12 per cent, condemnation cases rising 25 per cent. There were 2311 prosecutions for violations of price control and rationing regulations.

The report was sent to the annual session of the senior judges of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, meeting here with the justices of the United States Supreme Court. The meeting which began yesterday will be resumed today.

Doctor Admits Patients Tied; Says He Had No Other Choice

courteous, unsympathetic and cruel" and the attendants in the psychiatric wards as "rough and harsh, noisy, unskilled and low in intelligence."

"I shall never forget the sight of my husband, chained to his bed," she wrote. "I finally persuaded an attendant to release his hands and feet, but they were chafed for days. Ultimately . . . I demanded he be removed to Doctors' Hospital."

The daughter of another former patient wrote, in a letter read by Bushfield: "My 75-year-old mother entered the tuberculosis ward in June and became nervous and upset over the bad food and sordid conditions. Her condition was diagnosed as insanity, and she was removed to the psychopathic building in a manner which only can be described as brutal, judging from the bruises on her body. There she was kept in a filthy room, where flies and dirt were rampant . . . Finally, after being admitted to St. Elizabeth's, she was declared sane."

In "State of Humility"

Another letter read by Bushfield was from a woman whose son, William, was admitted to the psychiatric ward about two months ago.

"He entered for observation and two days later when I saw him, he was in a state of great humility at the ragged clothes they had provided him. He had not had any drinking water in many hours because the ice had given out. All the patients slept in one large room—some were very disturbing, and one actually was vicious.

"I begged for his removal to St. Elizabeth's, but was told by Dr. Gilbert that 'the law holds these people here.' In two weeks at Gallinger, Billy lost 11 pounds, became nervous and excitable, and his arm shook. One of the inmates tried to strangle him, and he never forgot it. He was in constant fear of someone named Joe.

Talked of "Stiffs"

"Billy also mentioned he saw dead people being taken up the hill, and said that he, too, would be going up that hill some day. He said attendants talked of 'stiffs' in a callous manner in front of the patients."

Dr. Gilbert, asked by Bushfield about testimony Monday that "one attendant dearly loved to beat up the patients," admitted that "we have found many attendants in recent months who were not adapted to their work, because our personnel staff is so badly depleted that we have to take whomever we can get."

One attendant had been dismissed the day before, he said, for being "verbally abusive' to the patients.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, who was the first witness called, was asked specifically by Bushfield about charges rooms and kitchens were infested with roaches. He said: "Roaches naturally are troublesome in most institutions, and at Gallinger we have quite a problem with patients storing food in their rooms, which attracts them."

Baths Every 3 Weeks

Reading from a petition signed by patients, Bushfield said: "'The bed patients are sorrowfully neglected; a patient in one ward was not bathed once in three weeks, and another had a rectal hemorrhage and had ahtr ewote urt" rhage and had to wear the same pajamas three days.'"

"That is a reprehensible practice," Dr. Ruhland said. "I do not condone such things, but I do want to emphasize the hospital is entitled to 165 graduate nurses and now has 67 vacancies. These shortages in the staff naturally make the service under the standards we would like to maintain."

"The petition goes on: 'Men died as much from starvation as from tuberculosis; if food was not touched by the patient, no questions were asked,'" Bushfield said.

"That is an exaggeration, unsupported by actual facts," Dr. Ruhland replied.

Bushfield read a report from District Health Department inspectors in 1942 asserting that roofs leaked, sterilizers were rusty, roaches ran rampant, that two Chinese patients were serving as cooks in one of the kitchens, and garbage from the tuberculosis wards was fed directly to the hogs, which in turn were slaughtered to be served to those at the hospital.

"Do you mean that has been a practice?" Bushfield demanded. Dr. Ruhland admitted that it had.

"You're the health officer, Dr. Ruhland," Bushfield said. "Gallinger has been a continuing source of complaint for years, and for that reason alone it should receive special attention. You should be constantly on guard."

Quoting from another District Health Department report, he read nurses in the baby wards went from one infant to another without washing their hands, that they touched contaminated materials and then handled the babies, and that masks were worn improperly.

"That is bad nursing technique," Dr. Ruhland granted. "But I am happy to report that since that report was made, there has been definite improvement. However, there is plenty of room for further improvement in the nursing service."

Bushfield declared after the subcommittee adjourned Dr. Gilbert will testify further today and other witnesses will be Dr. Bocock, Dr. William F. Ossenfort, assistant surgeno general of the United States Public Health Service, who has made a special investigation of Gallinger; Commissioner Guy Mason, Bradley A. Snyder, chief engineer at the hospital; and Norman Stone, for some time a patient in the psychiatric ward.

The session will adjourn again at noon today when the Senate is called to order and will continue tomorrow, Bushfield indicated.

D. C. Naval Officer Killed in Plane Crash in Florida

Lieut. John F. O'Malley, USN, was killed three days after his 24th birthday in an airplane crash near Jacksonville, Fla., September 27, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

A native of Washington, Lieutenant O'Malley was the son of Capt. John Joseph O'Malley, USN, Medical Corps, commanding officer of the naval hospital at Jacksonville. He went to Western High School and Columbia Preparatory School and was graduated from the Naval Academy at Annapolis in February, 1941.

After serving on the USS New York, Lieutenant O'Malley was sent to Pensacola Air Station for flying instruction. In June he was transferred to Jacksonville. He had been a full lieutenant since September, 1942.

The Navy Department gave his last address as Long Beach, Calif.

First Lady Relays Message From Marine to Capital Girl

When Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt returned to Washington from the South Pacific war front she brought with her a message from a former Post reporter to his girl friend, a War Department secretary.

LEWIS

The reporter is Alfred Lewis, 28, a Marine Corps combat correspondent, and his girl friend is Helen Carl, 22, of 704 Quincy st. nw. Miss Carl received a telephone call Monday night from the White House. At first she thought it was a joke, but the First Lady really was on the other end of the line.

"I met your boy friend, Sergt. Al Lewis, in Australia, and he asked me to call and say hello!" said Mrs. Roosevelt. Helen was more than thrilled. It was almost unbelievable.

"The boys are doing a wonderful job, but they're lonesome for their girl friends. They're in a very healthy fine place. Sergeant Lewis sends his regards to all at The Post.

MISS CARL

"In fact, he gave me such a long list of friends to say hello to that I probably will have to call for help from Hope Miller (society editor of The Post.)

"We had a long chat," Mrs. Roosevelt concluded.

Miss Carl is secretary to Lieut. Col. H. Gordon Randall of the Army Transportation Corps.

Lewis, a police reporter for eight years before joining the Marines in August, 1942, came to The Post from the New York Evening Graphic. He received a law degree at Southwestern University in 1940. His parents live in Hartford, Conn.

Helen said Al might be lonesome, but it isn't because she doesn't write to him.

Car-Sharing Program Is Stimulated

Plan to Increase Passengers in Private Autos Told at Meeting

New stimulus was added to Washington's lagging "share-the-car" program yesterday when some 150 defense transportation officers representing Federal and private agencies met with officials of the Office of Price Administration and the Office of Defense Transportation in the District Building.

Plans were annuonced to conduct a car-sharing enlistment program throughout the metropolitan area. Steps to encourage greater use of private vehicles were taken following an announcement by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer that 35 per cent of all types of gasoline ration holders are driving their cars to and from work without even one extra passenger.

The meeting was opened by Commissioner John Russell Young who originated the share-the-ride plan in Washington.

Van Duzer pointed out that Washington does not easily lend itself to the share-the-ride plan because of the staggered hours of most of the Federal and civilian workers.

He said that one year ago passenger cars were carrying 1.14 persons per car and that a recent survey indicated this percentage had been raised to 2.46 passengers per car. He added that Washington was ahead of the national average of 2.08 percent.

Cooperation is Pledged

Milton E. Diehl, Virginia member of the Washington Regional Committee, and Benjamin G. Wilkinson, Maryland member, addressed the assemblage briefly and pledged their organizations' cooperation in any plan devised.

Charles Phillips, director of the Automobile Supply Rationing Division of the OPA, told the meeting that the present outlook for new tires was bad and it would be at least a year after the war is over before automobile manufacturers could replace more than two million cars which have been scrapped since Pearl Harbor.

F. W. Lovejoy, executive secretary of the committee, displayed a large map recently completed by the Highway Division. The map was divided into zones and included the arterial highways of nearby Virginia and Maryland which lead into Washington.

The zones on the map are indicated by a series of circles spaced to scale 1 mile apart. Each zone is represented by a letter and each highway by a number. The plan is to supply all car owners participating in the plan with windshield cards on which will be marked the zone route and mileage (the latter is based on the miles to the owner's home from the Zero Mile Stone on the Ellipse).

It was pointed out that this will give riders the opportunity of knowing exactly the route and destination of the driver. It is then proposed to place zone maps in convenient places in all public buildings with facilities for car-owner participants to inscribe the same information which appears on the card. This, it was said, will enable office workers to contact the driver and arrange for transportation.

Others introduced at the meeting were Robert K. Thompson, District OPA director, and Leo H. McCormick, Baltimore OPA director.

City News In Brief

The first faculty meeting of the year will be held by George Washington University at the Lisner Auditorium at 8 p. m. today. President Cloyd H. Marvin will preside. The 500 faculty members will pay tribute to Charles S. Baker, trustee of the university, and Prof. Carl D. Wells, both of whom died during the summer.

Woman's Band to Play

The Women's Battalion, all-female band, will play for two dances for servicemen during the week. One will be held at Fort Belvoir, for the men of Company A, Fifth Battalion, tonight. The other will be at Thomson Center, 12th and L sts. nw., on Friday night. The Thomson Center dance was originally scheduled for the auditorium of the Bureau of Engraving but as the auditorium was needed by Community War Fund workers, it was transferred to the other location.

Cornell Alumni to Meet

Under-draft age high school graduates and college opportunities offered them under the speed-up and V-12 programs will be discussed at the local Cronell Alumni Club's annual meeting Dodge Hotel garden house tomorrow evening at 7:30 p. m.

Speakers will include Prof. John C. Adams and Larry Gubb, national president of the Cornell Alumni Association. Officers will be elected.

News of the Women's Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds

"It's either higher taxes or inflation. There is no choice. So declared Randolph Paul, General Counsel of the Treasury, speaker at the Women's National Press Club's opening luncheon meeting yesterday at the Willard Hotel.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

"If we have a national income of 155-billion dollars for the calendar year 1944, our present taxes will take about 20 billion, leaving 135 billion," he said. "Assuming that we have 90 billion dollars of goods and service this will leave a gross gap of 45 billion. We hav got to save more or tax more, or we will have inflation."

Mr. Paul declared that he was in favor of not only higher taxes but of simplified taxes. Then he went on to point out that taxes are low rather than high in the light of the function of raising revenue needed to fight the war. During the fiscal year 1944, about 38 billion dollars, it is estimated, will be raised through taxes by the Federal Government. About 109 billion will be spent in the same 12 months. Taxes will fall short—around 66 billion dollars—of raising the revenue the Government needs.

To the extent that we reduce this deficit by more taxes we keep the debt down, keep down interest-carrying charges, keep down future taxes and keep freedom to deal with postwar problems, according to Mr. Paul.

In order to simplify the complex tax system, Mr .Paul said that the Treasury already had proposed the elimination of the victory tax (rebate too complicated after the war); elimination of the earned-income credit; merging of the normal and surtax into one simple schedule; simplified returns.

Congresswoman Jessie Sumner of Illinois, a guest of the club, demanded that Mr. Paul clarify the Government's policy on taxes.

"I hereby demand to know the Government's policy in regard to taxes, so I can tell the people what to expect," said Representative Sumner.

Sidestepping the answer, Mr. Paul replied, "My mouth is sealed with Washington's censorship, but generally I can say, "We need a flexible tax policy to deal with the problems of the moment. But there is plenty of money and we ought to tax now so as to keep our debt down to a minimum."

May Craig, new club president, presided and introduced the speaker.

Did You Know That . . .?

At least one group of Government girls is solving the recreation problem. Those living in the West Potomac Park Residence Hall have inaugurated a series of fall and winter dances, with servicemen as guests. The dances are held in the new recreation building at 17th st. and Independence ave. sw.—between the river and the Tidal Basin. Miss Clara J. Langmack is the director. Assisting her are two workers from the Red Cross. However, the girls themselves plan the dances.

Since attendance is limited to 150 men and 100 girls a rotation system has been worked out to give all a chance. A central dance committee composed of girls from the various agencies and States plans the events. Miss Catherine Eastep, employe of the U. S. Coast Guard, from North Carolina, is chairman.

War services, recreational and hospitality committee of Dupont Circle area held another of its musicales last night at Scott's Hotel, 21131 O st. nw. Among those singing and playing Hawaiian and popular tunes were Howard Shepherd, Chester Raynolds, Buddie Withers, Miss Mary de Vakos, illustrated Spanish and Greek sounds. Miss Bessie Bonas played the violin and Antoinette Charuhas the accordion.

Doings of the Day

Mrs. Hermann Habicht, who spent many years in Russia, discusses "What Russian Women Are Doing in the War" at the Soroptimist Club's 1 o'clock luncheon meeting at the Willard Hotel. Dr. Rosalind Bain is in charge of the program. Mrs. Jewell Downs gives sevral musical numbers. YWCA holds square dance (band and caller), 8:30 p. m. in Barker Hall . . . Zonta Club of Washington holds its regular monthly business meeting, 1 p. m., at the YWCA.

Bits of This and That . . .

Mrs. Thomas Burke, Latin-American Chairman of the Peoples Mandate Committee for Inter-American Peace and Cooperation will broadcast to Central America at 10 o'clock tomorrow night. This is in observance of the eighth birthday of the committee, which has representatives in all the Latin-American republics who are cooperating with the campaign of the committee to secure united American action for lasting peace. The address will be made in Spanish and will be carried on the Coordination of Inter-American Affairs' Office's "program," Americanso Todos." Mrs. Burke, a native Chilean, is the wife of Thomas Burke, Chief, Division of International Communications of the State Department. . . . Mrs. Agnes McCall Parker, pioneer in speech culture in this section, was guest speaker at meeting of Nu Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi, last night at the club rooms, 710-14th st. nw. Mrs. J. E. Saugstad is sponsor of the chapter.

What with the evening turned over to the Brazilians—it's sure to be a gay occasion. Instead of its usual meeting, the M. Eleanor Brackenridge Club has turned Friday night over to its Brazilian committee for an informal get-together, 9 o'clock, at the Washington Hotel.

Mme. Alencastro Guimaraes, charming wife of the First Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy, will play and sing a group of native songs. Club members hope she won't forget to include "Lunar do Sertao." Mrs. Harriet Matthews, the club's secretary, will give a very, very brief talk.

Incidentally, Senorita Carmen Lara of the Dominican Republic, the club's first scholarship student, plans to return to her country around October 11. She hopes to organize a Brackenridge Club in her country. Also, as a teacher, she intends to get her students in the habit of writing friendship letters to school children here.

Woman Is Desperate, Because Cheated of Greatest Ambition: To Have Children; She Cannot Produce Them and Her Husband Doesn't Care to Adopt Them

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am writing to you about a problem that has me just about desperate. The situation is this: I feel that I can never be happy, or even mildly content, without children; and my husband is sure he couldn't bear having them in our home. I grew up in a family where all of us thought a baby was just about the sweetest thing in the world and that children were vitally interesting at any age. My husband grew up in a family where there was no laughter, no tolerance, and no understanding or affection. We met in college. He had just received his Ph. D. degree in a science and I was in the undergraduate school. He is extremely intelligent and his character is in every way above reproach and he treats me with the greatest respect and affection. We have just about everything in common except our feeling about children.

We were very much in love when we married,—and still are. It seems that my husband had dreaded marriage, just because of his attitude toward children; and had promised himself he never would "fall for" any girl to the extent of wanting to marry her, because his attitude would not be fair to her. However, he did; and the first thing he said to me, after I accepted his proposal of marriage, was, "How do you feel about children?" I said, "I adore them;" and he lost his nerve about telling me how he felt, because he was afraid of losing me. We have been married seven years. For the first two years, I agreed with him when he said we should enjoy our freedom and become adjusted to each other before having a family. But after five years, I felt I just couldn't postpone having children any longer. Then I remembered something a gynecologist had once said to me,—to the effect that I probably was constitutionally incapable of bearing children successfully. So I consulted two other gynecologists, both of the highest repute, and they both confirmed that diagnosis; as did my family physician. They advised me to adopt a child.

I have been trying for two years to win my husband over to this plan, and have used every approach I can think of,—even threatening to leave. But with no success. He took my threat very seriously and was terribly broken up about it; but he came to the decision that if I did leave him, only one life would be ruined,—his. Because he believes I would find someone else who would want children. But I couldn't bear the thought of being married to anyone other than my husband . . . He didn't want a dog; but we finally got one; and now he adores the little fellow and is wonderful with him. He didn't even want a car; said they were too much responsibility, etc. But when we finally got one, he had a grand time with it, and the first thing he wants after the war is another car. (We sold the old one). He didn't want to move to a better apartment; but since we've moved, he is delighted. He is just conservative about everything except his science and fears change . . . I hope you can shed some ray of hope on the situation. Sincerely, E. E.

She's Stood Enough Nonsense From Husband

DEAR E. E.: There is no question in my mind as to what you ought to do. The proper course is conspicuously obvious. You ought to get a child,—by adoption, of course;—and with bland front, stout heart and never-say-die obstinacy in the matter of "becoming a mother," acquaint your husband (by your positive, steam-roller action in realizing your dream) with the fact that there is nothing he can do about the situation except accept it. Ethically, you have the right to do this. Far more right, indeed, than he has to deny you the "family" you crave, with every fiber of your being. You have this right, because you were absolutely honest with him from the first, about "adoring" children and meaning to have them. Whereas he forfeited the right to deny them to you, when he married you knowing full well that your life would be incomplete without children, and without daring to confront you with his preference to the contrary.

I am sold on the bold course for several reasons. For one thing, because your husband's attitude toward children is in itself childish (and probably camouflages an agonizedly bashful distrust of himself in relation to them); and because, for his own good (and as a means of dragging him over the threshold into a fuller life), he needs to be firmly taken in hand by a comfortably self-assured, maternal-type woman and made acquainted,—as with a fact accomplished,—with what he has been missing, due to his emotional backwardness. Because his past record of at-first-reluctant and later-delighted accommodation to other improvements in his design-for-living (cleverly foisted on him by you) shows that he does have great latent capacity to "be like other people;" and that when crowded into change, he takes to it like a duck to water, completely forgetting he resisted the plunge,—which (when combined with his altogether fine character) augurs a most happy and successful adaptation to the father-role, once you put him to it. Because, as already said, you have a "right" to children in this marriage; and, at the very least, to his benevolent assistance in rearing them. And because worthy projects are best promoted,—in the face of passive opposition,—by a fearless drive toward irresistible purpose.

Furnish the Nursery; Beat Bushes for Baby

Only one major hurdle stands in the way of making your dream come true; and of watching your husband (1) learn to like it and (2) become a "bigger" and a happier man in consequence. And that hurdle is,—Whether the accredited child-placement agencies would grant you a child for adoption, on a trial basis; or even for short-term "foster-home" care, without first being assured of your husband's full and free consent to the enterprise. However, Miss Patricia Morss, chief of the Foster Care Service of the Board of Public Welfare, is very much interested in your particular story, and willing to help you, if she can. Her office is at 472 Indiana Avenue Northwest, telephone NAtional 6000,—and she is expecting to hear from you. So, here is my two-part advice: See Miss Morss. And start furnishing the nursery, in impudently smiling defiance of your husband's scandalized reaction. If Miss Morss has no help or hope to give you, after analyzing the situation to her satisfaction, put the problem up to your family physician,—(a) to find you a baby to adopt, or to keep on a foster-home basis; and (b) to steer your husband into doing his minimum duty by you. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

THE GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay

'Don't Go To Any Trouble'

(The helpful husband tells how to entertain company.)

She—I don't see how I'm ever going to have the strength to go through with that dinner for the Chumleys.

He—Oh, I wouldn't do much—just throw something together.

She—There's always so much you have to do. Take this house. It'll have to be completely gone over.

He—That's all nonsense. They won't go around looking in the corners for dirt.

She—That's just the trouble. They wouldn't have to look in the corners.

He—I wouldn't wear myself out. Why don't you have someone in to help you?

She—Do you want to make me scream?

He—Then I certainly wouldn't do much about the food—just pick up a few things at the store.

She—But didn't he tell you what a treat it was going to be for them to get some home-cooked food because they ate out so much? Besides you can't pick up things at the store any more—especially when your ration stamps have been used up.

He—Well I wouldn't have much . . . just some meat . . . and bread . . . and vegetables . . . and dessert . . . and coffee . . . or lemonade. People always like simple food best.

She—Yes—like fried chicken and hot biscuits.

He—Why do you bother frying your chicken? Why don't you just bake it with dressing? Or stew it and put the biscuits on top?

She—Did you ever fix a chicken to cook?

He—No—but—er—well, you don't have to have chicken. If it's so much trouble. Why don't you fix up some bologney or hamburger some new way?

She—WHAT new way? . . . No, there's nothing to do but to have fried chicken, and of course mashed potatoes, nuisance that they are.

He—Why do you have to have mashed potatoes? Why don't you just have potato salad or something?

She—Say, I WILL start screaming pretty soon . . . I'll have a green salad of course.

He—Then I'd just cut up some tomatoes and cucumbers and lettuce and onions and things in a big bowl.

She—Yes—just with a turn of the wrist.

He—And one thing certain, I wouldn't have any elaborate fancy desserts. People like simple foods. I'd just buy some ice cream—and serve it with some good homemade cake.

She—If you call THAT a simple dessert.

He—Well, you could slice peaches and serve them with the cake.

She—Did you ever bake a "good homemade cake?"

He—No—er—but—say, why don't you make a pie! A lemon pie! That would be plenty good!

She—Yes, or a baked Alaska. . . . It's not the food so much. We have to eat, anyway. It's the general trouble . . . getting out all the best china and linen and polishing the silver—

He—Oh I wouldn't go to all that trouble! Why don't you you make it a picnic? Fix up a table in the yard!

She—And carry everything in and out . . . and fight off the flies . . . and the worms. . . .

He—Say! Why not have a picnics inside! All of us get down and eat off the floor!

She—You mean off of my best rug! No indeed!

He—Well I know one thing. If I were doing this I'd simplify it somehow.

She—There's just so much that has to be done——

He—All right, then. Have it your way. Women always love to make work for themselves.

Alternate Window Drapes

With dry cleaners busy as beavers and many kinds of materials hard to find, you'll want to take care of your winter drapes. Alernate them to expose them evenly to light, which weakens the fabric. Don't let curtains blow through your windows or rub against the screens. Remember that frequent hard brushing of heavy drapes will help keep them clean.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Even before the dawn of red and blue ration points, a pot of baked beans was a symbol of thrifty nutrition. Now that all cooks are faced with the problem of making red coupons go as far as possible, they look around for the best possible protein substitutes. Dried legumes is one of the best answers.

Martha Ellyn

Dried beans took on new importance with the rationing of food. And as the point value of foods such as meat, cheese and butter advanced, you can be sure that the knowing meal-planners started including legume dishes in their menus.

If you were called upon to furnish a substantial main dish, you did not know the food whims of your guests, and your points were limited, you would be on a safe margin if you served a pot of baked beans. Practically every one counts baked beans among their favorite sturdy foods. Many men have bemoaned the fact that baked beans are no longer available in tin cans.

But there is more than one way to a flavorsome pot of baked beans. Pre-cooked beans and quick-frozen ones deserve special mention. Both can be prepared with a minimum of effort and baked in a short time. If you are not so situated that you can bake beans from "scratch" then use the pre-cooked beans and slow-bake them to tenderness.

Beans can be successfully baked by the over-night soaking way, or as some knowing cooks do simmer them for a short time before they pop them into the bean pot with the additions, like onions, mustard, molasses and spices, which make them so appealing.

Boston baked beans are one of the purest strains of baked beans. They keep their reputation without the benefit of tomatoes, celery and a number of other seasonings. Today the dinner menu includes Boston Baked Beans. You will find that in both point, money and nutritional value they are a splendid buy.

Dinner Menu

Vegetable Juice Cocktail
Boston Baked Beans
Calavo-Tomato Salad
Cornmeal Muffins, Butter
Chilled Baked Pears with Cream
Coffee

The following recipe is one for baking beans in the time-honored Boston manner:

BOSTON BAKED BEANS

Pick over 1 quart beans. Cover with cold water and soak overnight. Drain, cover with fresh water, heat slowly (keeping water below boiling point) and cook until skins will burst—which is best determined by taking a few beans on the tip of a spoon and blowing on them, when skins will burst if sufficiently cooked. Drain beans. Scald ¾ pound salt pork and scrape, remove ¼ inch slice and put in the bottom of bean pot. Cut through rind of remaining pork every half-inch, making cuts 1 inch deep. Place 1 medium-sized onion in bottom of bean pot. Put beans in pot and bury pork in beans, leaving rind exposed. Mix together, 1 tablespoon salt, 1 cup molasses (more or less according to sweetness desired), ½ teaspoon dry mustard and 1 cup boiling water. Pour this mixture over the beans, then add enough boiling water to cover the beans. Cover the bean pot and bake 6 hours in a slow oven, 250 degrees, uncovering the last hour of cooking, so that the rind may become brown and crisp. Add water if necessary. If pork mixed with lean is preferred then use less salt.

If you want to achieve delicious baked beans in less time, use the pre-cooked baked beans. They require but a few points for a pound package. It takes a short time to prepare them for baking and only 30 minutes to bake.

Colonial Bouillon Cubes!

Bouillon cubes were popular in early colonial times. Men carried such in their pockets to make broth on trips. (The cubes were called "pocket soup.")

Clothes for AAV Workers

By Ruth Gregory

Do you know what the AAVS are?

If you're a high school graduate, aged somewhere between 18 and 45, physically fit, and anxious to be of service to your country, you ought to know about the work of the Anti-Aircraft Volunteers—and rush right out and join up.

Nobody will pin medals on you. Your name won't get in the paper, but you'll have the satisfaction of knowing that you're a very important link in the defense of the Capital of the United States; that your volunteer work means you'll be releasing soldiers for the fighting fronts.

The kind of work you'll be doing is illustrated in the photograph above—plotting the course of all aircraft within the Washington area. The job demands alert and responsible women (also agile ones).

The Right Clothes

Here's one place where slacks for working get the green light. Although there's no definite uniform required, the Volunteer Workers have found that navy shirts and slacks are the most efficient and most comfortable answer. And that's what they'll ask you to wear when you sign up for this exciting work.

Slacks

We found plenty of good serviceable slacks about town, ranging from about $6 on up, according to what your budget will permit. One pair is an extraordinary value for the money—all wool botany flannel with an adjustable belt. They're available in sizes 12 to 18 and are under $6. (We said "incredible" when the store told us about them, but they're real—100 per cent wool).

We found another pair, heavier in weight and with a harder finish (they'll keep a crease better), also all wool botany flannel for under $11. They are available in sizes 10 to 20.

Shirt and Slack Set

We also found an all-in-one costume for you in rayon gabardine for under $8. The long-sleeved shirt can be worn either tucked inside the slacks or outside.

This is a thoroughly practical outfit — easily laundered, and gabardine can take a terrific beating without crying uncle. This comes in sizes 12 to 20.

Shirts

We had a little difficulty here—checked with every store in town and found that navy shirts are one of our wartime casualties. (Navy dye used by our Navy). But we found long-sleeved classic shirts in limited quantities at two stores (with further shipments expected at one store). One of these comes in spun rayon, and the other in rayon crepe—under $4, sizes 32-38.

We found short-sleeved ones in the same materials in two places for the same price, same size range.

To find out about the Anti-Aircraft Volunteers call the AAV interviewing office (EXecutive 6688, extension 9) for an appointment.

For further information regarding the slacks and shirts please call NAtional 4200, extension 324, between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

In 30 years or so we have seen the baby's feeding programs change from any old time, to the two-hour and then the three and four hour schedules. Gradually we have arrived at the three-meal schedule.

This last, drastic as it sounds, has some very marked advantages. Obviously, it is designed for the baby who shows a distaste for one or the other of his heretofore four meals.

This indifference to the 10 a. m. or 2 p. m. bottle may show up as early as the fourth month, in well-fed children, and is illustrated by the baby's tendency to leave several ounces in these bottles. The other meals he eats with gusto.

The change to a three-meal schedule is easier if the baby does not waken too early in the morning. With a little encouragement the baby can wait for food until 7 or 7:30, thus making it possible to start the day at about the same time mother and father are eating their breakfasts.

The time intervals for the three-meal schedule will then be: Breakfast from 7 to 7:30 a. m.; Lunch from 11:30 to 12:30 and dinner from 5:30 to 6:30. The baby's own appetite and hunger will determine just which hours will be chosen.

Since there is a rather long time between lunch and dinner, this is an excellent time to give the daily 4 ounces of orange juice and a cracker. Or, if this is given in the morning, midmeal between breakfast and lunch, half a glass of milk and two crackers may be welcomed by baby after the noon nap. This again depends upon baby's own appetite for this afternoon lunch.

The advantages of this plan are obvious. The mother's work is materially decreased. The baby's digestion benefits when there are long intervals between meals. The appetite will increase on a schedule which gives baby an opportunity to get hungry and want food, instead of being wakened to eat and being made to eat because it is there and not because he is hungry.

Visiting Journalists Are Feted

Journalists from Guatemala, Panama and Honduras, who have been on tour of the United States, are spending their final week in Washington, before returning home. They arrived on Monday from New York and are being entertained at a round of fetes, opening yesterday with the cocktail party given by the Ambassador of Honduras and Senora de Caceres. Particular guests of honor were members of the Honduran press, the trio including Vidal Nejia, Antonio Alcantara and Vivente Machado. The group from Panama — Carlos Sole Bosch, Eduardo Morgan and Enrique Veranecci, were also there and representatives of the Guatemalan press enjoying the party were Ramon Blanco, Ovidio Rodas and Ricardo Peralda.

Vice President and Mrs. Henry Wallace had been asked to the party, and mingling congenially with members of the American newspaper fraternity were the Ambassador of Panama and Senora de Jimenez, the Guatemalan Ambassador, Dr. Adrian Recinos, and other envoys from the Central American republics.

In the company also were the board of governors of the National Press Club, the press members of the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs. It was through the invitation of the Office of the Coordinator and the National Press Club that the journalists from these three South American republics made the trip to the United States.

This afternoon the Ambassador of Panama and Senora de Jimenez will be hosts at a late afternoon party for the visitors.

Miss Chapline Becomes Bride of Marine Officer

St. Ann's Church was the setting yesterday for the wedding of Miss Dorothy Elizabeth Chapline to Lieut. Richmond Dean FitzGerald, USMCR.

The bride is the daughter of Capt. Vance Duncan Chapline, U. S. Navy, and Mrs. Chapline, and Lieutenant FitzGerald is the son of Dr. and Mrs. James P. FitzGerald of Highland Park, Ill.

Officiating at the 5:30 service was the Rev. Henry D. Collins. Capt. Chapline gave his daughter in marriage. She was attired in a white brocade dress designed with full skirt and short circular train. Her long veil of heirloom illusion was gathered into a cap and caught with orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of roses, orchids and stephanotis.

Miss Frances Morgan, stepsister of the bride, was the only attendant. She wore a frock of teal blue slipper satin, and carried American beauty roses matching her headpiece. Thomas Dean was best man for his nephew, and ushers included Lieut. Philip D. Dean, Lieut. William C. Wilcox, and Ensign George Hinckley.

A small reception followed at the Kennedy-Warren for members of the families.

Women With Business Experience Will Make Better Housewives, Says Woman Executive

Carlene Roberts Says Work Improves Understanding

By Elizabeth Henney

"One of the main reasons for domestic problems in this country has been a feminine lack of understanding of the business world and I think the war has already helped to cure that." Carlene Roberts, who is now in Washington holding down the most unfeminine position of assistant to the vice president of the American Air Lines was speaking. She is a woman whose dynamic personality and ability to finish a job with split-second speed has been responsible for her meteoric rise in business.

"I don't believe domestically inclined women will even want to remain to clutter up the post-war business field," she went on. "I do believe, though, that those who stepped in to help, and who go back to the home fireside, will be much better housewives because of their business experience. They will understand how weary a bad day at the office can make the breadwinner, and will be able to see by the look in his eyes that this is the evening to call off that party with the Joneses and to let Papa relax by the fireside with his slippers and pipe."

Found Out About Living Costs

But, oddly enough, it was her understanding of the little woman's problems that won her the present job in Washington.

The story of that is a long one, but here are the highlights:

In 1939 American Airlines decided to transfer its headquarters from Chicago to LaGuardia Field, N. Y., and was faced with the problem of moving an office personnel of 700 together with their families, which totaled over 2100.

So they called Carlene Roberts, then secretary to Vice President O. M. Mosier and, said something like this. "It's going to be a tough problem to transport that many people into a new part of the country and keep them happy. In order to do so there are a great many things we will need to know. It is going to be your job to find out those things for us. We want to know what about this business of living costs being so much higher in New York. If it is, we want to know how much, proportionately, so that we can raise salaries where necessary to avoid hardship. We want to know housing conditions."

So Carlene Roberts went. She established an office, and hired a staff, and soon found that living costs on Long Island were approximately the same as in suburban Chicago. They found that though the cost of living was higher in Manhattan, that too, was about the same as it was in the central part of Chicago.

Knew Problems Of 700 Families

Before she left Chicago, Carlene Roberts had canvassed each one of the 700 families and learned their problems; whether they wanted to buy or rent a house or apartment; how big it would have to be; within what price range; how many children they had and whether they needed to be located near grade or high school; what church they attended, and whether they would expect to use a highway or streetcar line for going to work or to town.

Then each couple was sent, at the company's expense, to New York for a few days. Carlene Roberts, with a list of the places most closely answering the needs of "The Little Woman," whizzed each couple around to see and select their new home.

The home selected, each couple was given a quick "Cook's Tour" of New York, presented with a brochure about the community they would be living in; and whisked back, via the magic carpet of the air lanes, to their Chicago home. There they had a month to wind up affairs and pack and move to their new home, which they felt was already familiar territory, and not a trip into the unknown wilderness.

That the morale of the organization in its new location was phenomenally high goes without saying, and as a result, no one was surprised that Carlene Roberts was chosen when an "expert trouble-shooter" was needed in Washington as assistant to the vice president.

And after all, those who knew her two phobias and her personal background were pretty sure she could handle any job that was thrown at her. And they have been.

Her phobias—"those who fail to follow through in business, and the defeatist attitude of people who are enslaved to habit and routine."

CARLENE ROBERTS

Mrs. Atwill Entertains for Niece, Mrs. White

Mrs. Louise Atwill entertained at dinner last evening for her niece, Mrs. Frederick White, the former Miss Cristine Cromwell, who is spending a month in Washington with her grandmother, Mrs. Edward Stotesbury, before going to Palm Beach.

The hostess referred to last night's group of guests as the "mopping up gang," for she had told them as they gathered that they were to finish up the food left over from her very gay birthday fete on Friday evening. True or false, the party was perfect from beginning to end.

In the company to greet Mrs. White were Admiral and Mrs. Clark Woodward, Miss Aurora Quezon, Miss Zaneida Quezon, daughters of the President of the Philippines, and Mrs. Quezon; Mr. and Mres. Kenneth Watson, Mrs. Dorothy Norman, Miss Meredith Howard, Mrs. Emily Smith, Mrs. Keeney Phillips, Col. Ben Hachemayer, Capt. Dermott Dinan, Wing Commander Roald Dahl, Capt. Alf Heiberg, Sergt. J. H. Valdersec, Merritt Swift, John A. Logan and George Williams.

Norfolk Girl Is Bride of Lieut. Dulany

Special Dispatch to The Post

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 28.—At a ceremony here at 6 o'clock this evening in the Episcopal Church of Christ and St. Luke, Miss Jane Perrin Thompson became the bride of Lieut. Benjamin Weems Dulany, USMC.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Wardlaw Thompson of this city and Virginia Beach, and Lieutenant Dulany is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Rozier Dulany, jr., of Washington and Upperville, Va.

Due to a change of Lieutenant Dulany's orders, the date for the wedding was set two days ago and was attended only by members of the families and a few close friends. The Rev. Taylor Willis officiated at the service and a reception took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. C. Cox.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white net, designed with full skirt and train. Her heirloom veil of rose pointe lace was fastened to her hair by a coronet of lace and she carried a bouquet of gardenias. Mrs. Howard Goodwin, and Miss Alice Williams were the only attendants. Both wore rust colored taffeta gowns and carried bouquets of chrysanthemums and yellow roses. Mr. Dulany was best man for his son and ushers were a group of Lieutenant Dulany's brother officers at the Norfolk Navy Yard, where he has been stationed.

Following a brief wedding trip, the couple will leave for the West Coast, where the bridegroom has been ordered.

Purely Personal

The American Ambassador to Panama, Edwin Wilson, is stopping at the Mayflower, having arrived there on Saturday from the Canal Zone. Also there this week is the Governor of North Dakota, John Moses.

Rear Admiral Randall Jacobs, U. S. Navy, and Mrs. Jacobs have returned to their home here after spending several days in New York.

Mme. Bon Compagni has returned to her apartment at the Mayflower after spending the summer in Bar Harbor. She will leave the end of this week for Hot Springs, Va., where she expects to be for the fall season.

Mrs. Louis Bachrach, with her young son, Alan, has joined Captain Bachrach in Derry, N. H.

Mr. and Mrs. Matthew B. Claussen and their daughter, Miss Marion Claussen, have returned to their apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel from Manchester, Vt., where they spent the summer.

Miss Inez Morgan, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William S. Morgan, has selected next Saturday as the date of her marriage to Peter W. Macuga, U. S. Army, son of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Macuga of Detroit. The ceremony will take place at St. Gabriel's Church.

About Washington

ONLY REGRET Mrs. Edward Stettinius has about her husband's appointment as Undersecretary of State is this: it caused her to miss that thrill of smashing a bottle of champagne across the proud prow of a Liberty ship. She and her husband were in California when he was notified of his new status and summoned back to Washington. He had gone out on business; she, having been named a ship sponsor, joined him in San Francisco a few days ago.

Mrs. Stettinius

"And then, after only 24 hours there, I turned right around and started home," she said yesterday. Since he had to come on back, I came with him . . . and missed christening the boat. I'm sorry about that."

Among Washington's most attractive hostesses, Virginia-born Mrs. Stettinius is one of those rare women who have charm and beauty in equal portions. She dresses beautifully, gracefully adorns any drawing room she enters, but frankly admits she prefers the out-of-doors . . . particularly around Horseshoe Farm, her place in Orange, Va. She spent the summer there; rarely came to Washington because of gas rationing; didn't mind a bit. "I love farm life; never tire of it," she said.

Her husband's new appointment came as "a complete surprise" to her . . . "and to him," she added. They boarded a plane in San Francisco at once; reached Washington on Monday. Now, Mrs. Stettinius is busy getting their Shoreham apartment in order for the winter. The three boys are in school—the 10-year-old twins, Wallace and Joey, are in Washington; Ted, 15, attends Woodberry.

WASHINGTON UPPER-CRUSTERS are traditionally theater-conscious. For at least a decade, almost any opening at the National has drawn celebrities in droves. But, even considering that, the metropolitan premier of Frederick Lonsdale's "Another Love Story" broke all records for audiences generously studded with Capital luminaries.

Fact is, they were all over the place. And from what I could gather in the crowded foyer between acts, every other person there was either a friend of the author or of some member of the cast. Mr. Lonsdale is the house guest of the Deering Howes, who entertained at dinner in his honor before the performance and then came on with their company, which included the Harry Hopkinses. Roland Young, a star of the play, is staying with Undersecretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal, who was dinner host before the opening. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Luce (Clare Boothe) entertained at dinner at the Carlton, and then took their guests on to the theater. In their party were Miss Margaret Case of Vogue magazine, who returned to New York yesterday; Mrs. Luce's pretty daughter, Ann Clare Brokaw; John Foster of the British Embassy, and Archduke Otto of Hapsburg. Miss Brokaw, by the way, is visiting here for a few days before she goes to California to enter her senior year at Leland Stanford.

Ann C. Brokaw

Another pretheater dinner at the Carlton on Monday was the one at which I was fortunate enough to be. Hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Max O'Rell Truitt, friends of Mr. Lonsdale, and as popular a couple as you'll find anywhere in Washington. In their party were former Attorney General and Mrs. Homer Cummings, Mr. and Mrs. William Stanley, Mrs. Douglas MacArthur 2d, John Snyder, vice president of the St. Louis National Bank, and John Olin, president of a cartridge company that turns out more than eight million "rounds" a day.

Lieut. Gilbert Roland of film fame squired a general and his wife backstage after the show, and made his way toward Margaret Lindsay's dressing room. The doorway was thronged with Miss Lindsay's former classmates at National Park Seminary, all of whom were thrilled with her success in her stage debut.

HERE AND THERE: Washington art lovers are consulting train and plane schedules and making reservations for trips to New York around October 20. There's a very special reason: That's when the modern art collection of Frank Crowninshield is slated to go on sale at the Parke-Bernet Galleries, Inc.

Mr. Crowninshield, as you probably know, was a founder of the Museum of Modern Art, which had several exhibitions here a few seasons ago, and to which he has frequently lent his paintings and examples of sculpture. His collection, incidentally, has been assembled over a period of 30 years, and includes some of the best works of Charles Despiau and Andre Dunoyer de Segonzac; also, four Degas bronzes, two sculptures by Maillol, Renoir's bust of his son, paintings, drawings or prints by Matisse, Pascin, Laurencin, Picasso, Lautrec and others. Among the American artists represented are Eugene Speicher, Charles Demuth, George Bellows, Maurice Sterne and Ernest Lawson.

Her Engagement Told Today

MISS MIRIAM PATRICIA MORRIS

Harris & Ewing

Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris announce the engagement of their daughter Miriam Patricia Morris to Kenneth Todd Young, jr. Miss Morris was a graduate of Miss Hall's School and of Vassar College of the class of 1941. She made her debut in Washington and Baltimore during the fall of 1938 and was presented at the Bachelors Cotillion in December of that year. She is a member of the Washington Junior League. Miss Morris' father is the retiring president of the American Bar Association and was recently the American representative at the Inter-American Bar Association Conference in Rio de Janeiro. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. Wilbur W. Hubbard of "Widehall," Chestertown, Maryland.

Private Young, who is with the Army Air Forces, is the son of Mrs. Hunt Young of Cambridge and Mr. Kenneth Todd Young of Boston and the grandson of Mrs. Stephan Bonsal Hunt of Cambridge.

He is a graduate of Middlesex School and of Harvard University of the class of 1939 where he was a member of the D. U. club. He attended Lingnan University in Canton, China, and the Sorbonne in Paris. He received his MA degree from Harvard in 1942. Private Young is now stationed at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Mr. Bowers Entertained By Sen. Guffey

Vice President Henry Wallace was in the company of dinner guests last evening when Senator Joseph Guffey entertained for Claude G. Bowers, American Ambassador to Chile, at the Mayflower.

Other guests at this stag party included Justice Hugo Black, Postmaster General Frank C. Walker, Senator Alben Barkley, Senator Dennis Chavez, Senator Bennett Champ Clark, Senator D. Worth Clark, Senator Tom Connally, Senator James O. Eastland, Senator Allen J. Ellender, Senator Walter F. George, Senator Guy Gillette, Senator Theodore Green, Senator Carl Hatch, Senator Lister Hill, Senator Edwin Johnson, Senator Harley M. Kilgore, Senator Francis Maloney, Senator Burnet Maybank, Senator James E. Murray, Senator W. Lee O'Daniel, Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, Senator John L. McClelland, Senator Ernest McFarland, Senator Kenneth McKellar and Senator Scott Lucas.

Also Senator John M. Overton, Senator Claude Pepper, Senator George L. Radcliffe, Senator James Scrugham, Senator Tom Stewart, Senator Elbert D. Thomas, Senator Elmer Thomas, Senator James M. Tunnell, Senator Frederick Van Nuys, Senator Robert F. Wagner, Senator Mon C. Wallgren and Assistant Secretary of State Breckinridge Long.

In addition were Edward R. Stettinius, Prentice Brown, Clyde Herring, Col. Edwin Halsey, Leslie Biffle, Judge Sherman Minton, Charles Michelson and J. H. Bailey, jr.

Miss Thomas Is Recent Bride

Announcement is made by Mr. and Mrs. Erbin G. Thomas of the marriage of their daughter, Miss Morfudd Margaret Thomas, to Julian C. Reynolds of Culpeper, Va.

The ceremony took place a few days ago at the historic Presbyterian Church in Warrenton, Va. Given in marriage by her father, the bride was unattended and Chase Reynolds served his brother as best man.

The Elfin Miss Henie Is Still Queen of the Rinks

Skating Star in Top Form in 'Wintertime'; Roxyettes Hostesses at Canteen Tonight; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

ALTHOUGH NOT SEEN on a local screen in many months, it should be comforting to her admirers to know that Sonja Henie in her latest picture betrays no inclination to relinquish her place as foremost of the feminine ice-skaters to any aspiring competitor.

SONJA HENIE

Previewed yesterday morning, the Twentieth Century-Fox production of "Wintertime" unspooled a fable that follows the usual Henie formula with her periods in the rink comprising its most notable sequences. For a touch of novelty, Miss Henie closes the amiable proceedings in a spectacular finale on black ice—if you can figure that out. There seems to be a thin layer of ink on the pond that gives much the glassy effect of those black glass rear-view mirrors they used to have on automobiles. Beautiful, but still a little weird.

While "Wintertime" will not be along to the Capitol screen for a fortnight or so, it might be of further interest to know that when it does get there it may strike some retentive memories as being in the nature of a "Springtime in the Mountains" translated into "Snowtime in Quebec," with Woody Herman's Orchestra replacing Harry James' and Miss Henie supplanting Betty Grable. Not identical, of course, but cut from virtually the same pattern.

The star is surrounded by a likely cast, headed by the increasingly globular Jack Oakie. Cesar Romero—bogged down toward the end by a long stretch of union suit "comedy"—Carole Landis, S. Z. Sakall and a collar-ad "romantic interest" by the name of Cornel Wilde.

So what? So Sonja's skating, skiing and dancing—yes, dancing—are worth standing up to see.

And if you have been worrying about what will follow "Wintertime" and "For Whom the Bell Tolls" in the Loew houses, there will be coming up James Cagney's first for United Artists, "Johnny Come Lately;" "I Dood It," with Red Skelton and Eleanor Powell; Robert Donat's new English-made film, "Adventures of Tartu" and the Technicolor production of the late Eric Knight's "Lassie Come Home." Beyond that, you wouldn't remember them, anyway.

And on the Capitol stage you may begin anticipating the early appearances of such as the Junior Buckwalter Marimba Maids, a reengagement for Dick Buckley, one of the hits of last spring; Ella Ardelti, the distaff aerialist; Virginia O'Brien, Woody Herman and His Orchestra (see above) and Dante, the magician.

Scrap That Misapprehension

For some unfathomable reason and from an intangible source, the impression seems to have become prevalent that because it was written, directed and is acted by soldiers, "The Army Play by Play," coming into the National next Monday night, must be the stage's equivalent of the screen's "war picture." To dispel that bleak falsification, I am advised on unimpeachable authority that the five one-act plays, plus the variety acts that have been added, provide what will be remembered as one of the season's gayest evenings in the theater, abounding in fast fun, top-grade music and delirious dancing. The bill is dedicated to laughter, not the lachrymal glands. Feel better now?

The Earle Theater Roxyettes have been signally honored. Breaking its precedent for the first time in its year of operation, the Washington Stage Door Canteen has waived its rule governing junior hostesses and invited the Roxyettes to serve in that capacity at the Canteen tonight. In addition to wearing the uniform of the junior hostesses and taking over their other duties, the Thirteenth Street sirens will dance with the servicemen, mingle with them and otherwise make them happy throughout the evening. Sorry, youse guys, but one rule has not been relaxed. No dates after the Canteen closes!

There is one ostensible Broadway hit that Washington won't be seeing "prior to New York," although there was a time, 'way back yonder, when hopes ran high on the basis of nothing more substantial than wishful thinking. Cheryl Crawford's production of "One Touch of Venus," the S. J. Perelman-Ogden Nash-Kurt Weill musical comedy, after two sellout weeks at the Shubert Theater in Boston, now is playing a third in the Boston Opera House, preliminary to opening in New York on October 7. This is the one Marlene Dietrich thought she'd like to star in until she, or Jean Gabin, changed her mind—which probably now she wishes she hadn't. Mary Martin, Kenny Baker and John Boles are in the top spots, with Paula Lawrence and Teddy Hart featured—Washington favorites all. Oh, well.

That-Deadline-Is-Creeping-Up Note

Even if "Back the Attack" has closed, there are still plenty of other places to buy war bonds, you know.

And a Voice Like a Burbling Brook

blonde, beautiful and vivacious, not to mention being immensely popular, dons—or undons—familiar garb to appear opposite John Wayne, in a forthcoming something from RKO-Radio called "A Lady Takes a Chance." One is led to believe it has something to to with a bus tour of the "fourteen wonders of the West." As for that voice, she just can't do a thing with it—except score hit after hit!

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway Gazette

New York, Sept. 28.

POLITICS: Before the Quebec conference, Anthony Eden read the descriptions of himself which appeared in the American press. In those dispatches there were references to his graying hair. "At last," said Eden, "they no longer will say about me, 'the youthful diplomat' " . . . "You're wrong," Winston Churchill corrected him. "Remember MacDonald, Baldwin, Chamberlain and me. In British politics now, youth begins at 50 and middle age at 70."

WALTER PIDGEON

FINANCE DEPARTMENT: Last year, when Leon Henderson was a Government employe, he offered advice to the big corporations, free of charge. They wouldn't take it. This year, as a private citizen, he is receiving tremendous fees from the big corporations, for the same advice he once offered for nothing . . . And because his fees are so large, especially as compared to his Government salary of last year, Leon Henderson's income tax installment, paid on September 15, was larger than his total income last year.

ARRIVALS: Walter Pidgeon, Danny Kaye and Frank Sinatra arrived in New York on the same train. At the station a horde of wide-eyed, screaming Sinatra fans were waiting. They broke through the police lines, and yelled for Sinatra's autograph . . . The young singer saw the wild mob waiting, turned to Pidgeon and Kaye, and said: "You fellows are lucky you can't sing." . . . The veteran, unnoticed Pidgeon, wise in the ways of Hollywood fame, replied: "You're lucky you can."

CRIME DEPARTMENT: The notorious duo, Lepke and Gurrah—once the Nation's most hunted fugitives—soon will be reduced to one. Lepke, who now is under three sentences—death, life imprisonment and a 14-year Federal term—will not, however, be the first to die. His former partner, Gurrah, who is serving merely a life term, is ill and isn't expected to live more than a month.

THEATER DEPARTMENT: Peggy Sanford, of the American Theater Wing, was in the "Oklahoma" lobby, selling War Bonds. A tall man, entering the theater, stopped in front of her booth, and said: "I want to thank you for what you're doing for me." "For you?" replied Miss Sanford. "What do you mean—for you?" "I meant for me, too," was the answer. 'I'm Henry Morgenthau."

SONG DEPARTMENT: An interviewer asked Billy Rose about the song-hits he has written. "Mr. Rose," he began, "what inspired you to write 'Me and My Shadow'?" . . . "My inspiration for 'Me and My Shadow'," confessed Rose, remembering those lean days, "was Sheriff Finn."

HEDDA HOPPER

Meet Prof. Robinson!

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 28.—Edward G. Robinson plays a professor of psychology in "Once Off Guard." Nunnally Johnson's first for International Pictures. Fritz Lang, who'll direct, is having himself a time with the J. Edgar Hoover gang and the homicide squad in New York. They'd like to borrow little Ida Lupino for the top female. . . . Eric Remarque's new book is laid in Paris two years before the war. When he gets that out of the way, he'll write a play for Gloria Swanson . . . Dorothy McGuire [Mrs. John Swopel] returns to the screen to do Gwen in "So Little Time." . . . With added scenes for "Cry Havoc" out of the way. Margaret Sullavan and Leland Hayward are off to New York . . . Veronica Lake's postponed her Eastern trek. Goes to Seattle, Wash., instead for first action of her divorce from Maj. John Detlie, which was postponed on account of the death of her baby. She'll try to get her car away from him and expects quite a struggle. It's in his name.

EDWARD G. ROBINSON

Paging Maude Adams

Joan Fontaine has David Selznick's permission to do a play on Broadway. She wants to tackle only the most difficult—"Peter Pan." You must admit, that takes courage . . . Lucky Ray Milland appears opposite Gertrude Lawrence in "Lady In the Dark" on her first air show Sept. 30 . . . Pvt. Bill Morrow plans a welding to Scarlet Iris Bynum soon . . . Kay Aldridge tells me she and Johnny McClain definitely will marry on his next leave. . . . Our boys in Africa asked Frances Langford who was the hit of Broadway when she left. They thought she was kidding when she said Frank Sinatra. They'd never heard of him . . . Little Margaret O'Brien, Elsa Maxwell's favorite actress, received a medal of honor from Hon. Don Henshaw, of Ottawa, for helping the Canadian war bond drive. She made a short with Robert Young.

Success Does It

Sonny Tufts, Paramount's new baby, set himself a new high for hell raisin' on his New York visit. He thought it amusing to sign names of Paramount's executives to some of his better bills, and they're plenty happy that he's now safely home. But he was so good in "So Proudly We Hail" he got away with it . . . Ona Munson ill back East but huddling with Theresa Helburn, of the Theater Guild . . . Lieut. Al Wright received his second decoration for heroism in the Pacific. He's married to Rita Hunt, the luscious gal who poses for the official WAVE posters. That's doing a job for the Navy . . . James McKinley Bryan, before joining the Army, made a screen test for Twentieth Century which the studio thought sensational . . . Dorothy Gish swears Diana Lynn is so much like she was at that age that Buddy De Sylva stopped to listen on "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay." He's taken off their shelf "Peppy Polly" which Dorothy made in 1919. If it can be brought up to date, the Lynn girl will star in it.

Who Wouldn't?

Joan Davis so excited about getting top Crossley rating that she went around the house screaming, "I'm No. 1—I'm No. 1!" Became so hoarse she couldn't go to rehearsal. . . . Leon Henderson, since he doesn't have to worry about politics, is streamlined. So is his air material. He's boasting that he hasn't run into a snag yet. Don't worry, Leon, you will . . . Among our Atlantic travelers are Niles Trammel and John Royal . . . Ann Sothern and sister Bonnie got their heads together to write a song. They've got the title—"I Want V-mail From My Female." Ann, with Mary Livingstone, Doris Leroy and the Myrt 'Blums, off to New York to greet Jack Benny.

'Army Play by Play' and Ace Films Next Week

"THE ARMY PLAY BY PLAY," writen, directed and acted by soldiers, will be presented next week at the National Theater, with the usual matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. A symposium of five one-act plays, this attraction, which played to better than $100,000 at its Broadway, benefit premiere, is said to abound in comedy, music and dance. Added to the five plays are variety acts that round out a full evenings entertainment, with one of the best Army Bands in the orchestra pit. Opens Monday night, for the benefit of Army Emergency Relief.

Capitol

"HOLLY MATRIMONY." This Twentieth Century-Fox production, based on the late Arnold Bennett's novel, "'Buried Alive," has Monty Woolley and Gracie Fields, noted English commedienne, in its costellar roles, supported by Laird Gregar, Una O'Connor, Alan Mowbray, Melville Cooper, Franklin Pangborn and others of equal standing. The story concerns a famous artist who returns to London after a long absence and assumes the name of his valet who has just died, giving the valet his. The gentleman's gentleman is buried in Westminster Abbey, with such consequences as might be expected. Another of Gene Ford's specially assembled stage bills, headlined by Arthur Tracy, the "Street Singer," will augment the screen feature. Opens Thursday.

Earle

"A LADY TAKES A CHANCE," RKO-Radio's new costarrer for Jean Arthur and John Wayne, will be the next screen attraction at the Earle Theater. The story concerns adventures encountered on a cross-country bus trip to examine the "Fourteen wonders of the West." The new stage bill will be coheadlined by Lenny Gale, whose comedy is reported sure-fire, and Lowe, Hite and Stanley, the step-ladder trio, returned by popular demand. Follows the current, Grade-A, all-star musical, "Thank Your Lucky Stars."

RKO-Keith's

"BEHIND THE RISING SUN." A savagely stirring picturization of James R. Young's book of "inside" Japan, based on 13 years residence in Tokyo, with Tom Neal, Margo and J. Carroll Naish in its principal roles. It is an eye-opener to precisely what sort of race it is we are fighting in the Pacific and reveals aspects of Japanese character not heretofore treated on the screen. Held over a second week.

Palace

"FOR WHOM THE BELL TOLLS." Paramount's Tchnicolor picturization of the novel by Ernest Hemingway, with Gary Cooper, Ingrid Bergman, Katina Paxinou and Akim Tamiroff in the pivotal roles, supported by an admirable company. Fairthfully follows the book. Being presented in special engagements at advanced prices until 1945. Held over a third week.

Metropolitan

"DESTROYER". Columbia's melodrama of the old and new Navy and a strictly superannuated hero of the old, moves to the screen at the Metropolitan Theater direct from its successful engagement at the Earle. Edward G. Robinson is starred, with Glenn Ford, Regis Toomey and Marguerite Chapman in support. Opens Friday.

Columbia

"SO PROUDLY WE HAIL". Paramount's grim and absorbing drama of the nurses on Bataan and Corregidor, with Claudette Colbert, Paulette Goddard and Veronica Lake in the costellar roles, and Sonny Tufts, George Reeves and Walter Abel as the principal males. Opens Thursday for third downtown week.

Little

"BLACK SEA FIGHTERS," a thrillingly realistic record of Russian valor on land and sea, and "My Favorite Blonde," hilarious espionage comedy, costarring Bob Hope and Madelaine Carroll, comprise the splendid double-feature bill at the Little Theater. Not to be missed. Held over second week.

Gayety

BURLESQUE. The new bill announced for next week at the Gayety Theater will star Alyne Payne in the top femme spot, with two comical fellows, elegantly billed as "Stinky" and "Shorty," heading the comedy department. Competent principals and nimble chorus in support. Opens Friday.

Willard Roof

"TEN NIGHTS IN A BARROOM," the current hit, will bring the season of the Willard Roof Players and their Gay Nineties Music Hall to a close with the final performance Saturday night.

Jewish Rites Tonight Usher In New Year

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

Rosh Hashana, the Jewish new year 5704, will begin tonight throughout the world—in synagogues and temples, on fighting fronts where Jewish chaplains pray for men of their faith, and in concentration camps where persecuted brethren pray for the blessed hour of liberation.

Locally, the observance will start with simple Maariv services at sundown, followed by rites tomorrow morning, when the shofar (ram's horn) will be blown, a call to faith in the ultimate victory of righteousness.

The new year observance, marked for one day in Reformed temples and two days among Orthodox and Conservative congregations, ushers in a ten-day period of penitence, culminating in Yom Kippur, or Day of Atonement, beginning at sundown October 8. The penitent period is marked by prayer, repentance and self-examination on the part of every individual.

Vice President Henry A. Wallace will broadcast a Rosh Hashana message to Jewish fighting men today at 6:15 p. m., over WTOP. Also of interest to men and women in the service will be services tonight at 8 o'clock and tomorrow at 10 a. m. at the Jewish Community Center, under the auspices of the Army and Navy Committee of the Jewish Welfare Board. A "break-the-fast" supper and dance will follow the Yom Kippur services.

The Washington Hebrew Congregation, temple of Reformed Judaism, has arranged Holy Day services there and also at First Congregational Church, 10th and G sts. nw., with Rabbi Julian Morgenstern, president of Cincinnati's Hebrew Union College, as guest speaker.

Rabbi Morgenstern will speak tonight at 8 o'clock at the Temple, 822 8th st. nw., and tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. at First Church. Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, spiritual leader of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, will preach tonight at 8 o'clock at First Church, and tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. at the Temple.

A High Holy Day recention will take place in the Temple library following tomorrow's services.

Rosh Hashana services will be held tonight and tomorow at 6:30 o'clock, and Friday at 8:30 a. m. at B'nai Jacob Temple, 2504 Naylor rd. se. Rabbi Morris Blair will preside.

Rabbi Solomon H. Metz will conduct services tonight and tomorrow, Friday and Saturday mornings at Adas Israel Synagogue, 6th and I sts. nw.

Rosh Hashana services at Tifereth Israel Synagogue, 14th and Euclid sts. nw., will be tonight and tomorrow at 6:30 o'clock and tomorrow and Friday at 8:30 a. m. Rabbi Harry Silverstone is spiritual leader.

The Arlington Jewish Community Center has been invited to use the quarters of the Clarendon Methodist Church for its High Holy Day rites. Rabbi Samuel H. Berkowitz is spiritual leader.

2 Babies to Get Non-Com Stripes At Howard U.

Literally born to the service are two prospective sergeant majors who will become honorary noncoms at ceremonies at Howard University today.

Already able to bawl orders and to make respectively one captain and one lieutenant stand at attention they are 2-day-old Robert W. Wilson, jr., son of Capt. Robert W. Wilson, adjutant for the 2515th Service Unit stationed at the university, and 3½-month-old Kenneth L. Hardy, jr., son of Lieut. Kenneth L. Hardy, commander of Company A.

Certificates and stripes will be presented to the candidates in absentia by Col. Henry J. Boettcher, commandant of the Service Unit. Sergt. Major Wilson will be at home at 805 N. Lexington ave., Arlington, and Sergt. Major Hardy at 5000 Jay st. ne.

Funeral Services For C. E. Fritsch To Be Tomorrow

Funeral services for Charles E. Fritsch, 56, past department commander of the Disabled American Veterans, who died in Mount Alto Hospital yesterday, will be held at Fort Myer Chapel tomorrow at 2 p. m. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery. W. W. Chambers Co. is handling the funeral arrangements.

Mr. Fritsch was a retired employe of the U. S. Civil Service Commission. Before entering Government Service, he had been an actor on the legitimate and vaudeville stages. He lived at 933 L st. nw.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Margaret A. Fritsch of the L street address; three sisters and a brother.

Stamp Honors France

A new 5-cent stamp bearing the picture of the French flag as the central subject went on sale here yesterday. It is the seventh in a series of 11 honoring nations overrun by the Axis.

U. S. Bomber Interned

Lisbon, Portugal, Sept. 28 (AP).—A United States four-engined plane made a forced landing at a Lisbon airport today. The crew surrendered to authorities for internment.

Committee Asks Probe in Barring of Taxis to Negroes

The subcommittee on transportation of the Citizens' Committee on Race Relations, of which William J. Mileham is the chairman, has been asked by Wilbur La Roe, jr., temporary chairman of the Citizens' Committee on Race Relations, to investigate alleged discrimination against colored taxi passengers at Union Station, it was announced yesterday.

La Roe said "complaints had been made that colored people frequently were forbidden to enter taxicabs at the station." The referring of the matter by La Roe took place at a meeting at the YWCA the night before, it was said.

Other matters came to the attention of the committee. A. F. E. Horn's subcommittee on employment was asked to report on a Public Utility Commission hearing October 5 on the application of Capital Transit Co. to convert 52 cars from two-man cars to one-man cars due to a labor shortage. La Roe suggested there may not be a labor shortage if colored motormen and conductors were employed.

Servicemens' Lodging Needs Analyzed Here

Cots for transient servicemen have been occupied to capacity only once since formation of the local War Hospitality Committee's lodging committee nearly a year ago, it was revealed yesterday at a session to which interested House and Senate members were invited.

Representative Tolan (Republican) of California, who said his proposal to open the Senate garage for servicemen's sleeping quarters was no criticism of the committee's functions, heard Lodging Chairman Winfree Johnson tell the regular Tuesday meeting that an unexpected influx of servicemen the first weekend of the "Back the Attack" show accounted for the full-house situation that week.

Not Overnight Proposition

Washington's serviceman lodging problem is not one of overnight accommodation but of men waiting a few hours for a night train, Chairman Floyd Akers of the Home Hospitality Committee said.

Representative Tolan said sight of men sleeping on counters, benches, in telephone booths and on the grass at Union Station "sort of shocked me," but that he had no special desire to see the Senate garage used for lodging unless it was needed.

He said special attention should be given boys who come to see the Nation's Capital who may forget what they saw here, but will never forget how they were treated. He said he knew the War Hospitality Committee had investigated and been denied use of the Senate garage and subbasement for lodging.

Extra Lounging Space

The nine-story Capital Park Hotel soon to open for servicemen will provide, in addition to 100 hotel accommodations, lounge space where hundreds of men may nap and be called at train time, Akers said.

The committee voted to further investigate any need for barracks or use of the Senate garage and make recommendations at its next meeting.

Money to purchase 200 available cots and bedding as soon as it becomes available was authorized by the committee, from a community war fund allotment.

Mrs. William N. Galvin, WHC executive secretary, said the committee had not yet been able to purchase extra bedding for cots purchased in July.

Output of Coal Increases Slightly; Rationing Studied

While the Office of Price Administration went ahead with the preparation of plans for coal rationing "just in case," the Solid Fuels Administration announced Monday production of both bituminous coal and anthracite increased slightly during the week ended September 18, but was still below output schedules.

The production of bituminous coal was estimated at 12,100,000 tons for the week as compared with 11,575,000 tons the previous week in which many miners observed the Labor Day holiday.

Anthracite production for that week was estimated at 1,263,000 tons, compared with 1,190,000 tons for the previous week.

Fuel Administrator Harold L. Ickes declared consumers must practice utmost economy to help meet essential requirements.

Huidekoper Rites Here Tomorrow

Reginald Shippen Huidekoper, 67, of 2934 Edgevale Terrace, nw., retired attorney and a judge advocate during World War I, died yesterday at his summer home in South Dartmouth, Mass. He was a director of the National Savings & Trust Co. of Washington.

Born in Meadville, Pa., he was graduated from Harvard in 1898, and after studying law at Oxford and Columbia Universities, was admitted to the bar in 1901.

Mr. Huidekoper was Assistant U. S. Attorney for the District from 1909 to 1914, a member of the executive committee of the firm of Wilson, Huidekoper & Lesh, 1914-24. He served also as director of the St. Jo Paper Co., trustee and vice president of the Nemours Foundation, and coexecutor and co-trustee of estate of Alfred I. du Pont.

He is survived by his wife, the former Bessie Cazenove du Pont; two daughters, Ann du Pont and Elizabeth Gardner Huidekoper, and two sons, Peter G. and Lieut. Henry S. Huidekoper, overseas with the Marine Corps.

Funeral services will be held at the Washington address tomorrow at 5 p. m. The Rev. Dr. Charles T. Warner of Washington Cathedral will officiate.

'Back the Attack' Show Virtually Cleared Away

With characteristic Army efficiency, the exhibit tents of "Back the Attack" had nearly all been dismantled yesterday, only two days after the spectacle ended.

A loneliness similar to that at a State fair pervaded the 16-acre the event pervaded the 16-acre plot late yesterday. Each branch of the service which had set up its own display was responsible for removing its respective exhibits. Military police marched through the area at regular intervals to protect Army equipment that remained on the grounds.

Two Army vans, each the length of a box car and a half, were stretched across the area where the Air Force exhibit had attracted thousands of spectators September 9-26. The trucks were laden with planes that had been dismantled for shipping. The few remaining tents appeared desolate with only wooden floors and railings intact.

Prowler Kills Henry Heinz, Once Head of Kiwanis

Atlanta, Sept. 28 (AP).—Henry Heinz, past president of Kiwanis International, was shot to death by a prowler in his home tonight. He was vice-president of the Citizens and Southern National Bank of Atlanta.

Patrolman W. N. Miller said the 63-year-old banker's son-in-law, Dr. Bryant King Vann, a dentist, was wounded critically in an exchange of gunfire with police who were investigating the slaying. The patrolman said Dr. Vann and the officers apparently mistook each other for the intruder.

Heinz was past potentate of the Atlanta Shrine and president and director of the Atlanta Athletic Club.

MR. AND MRS. — A Call in the Night — By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoover

JOE, OUR PHONE IS RINGING. WHO CAN IT BE AT THIS HOUR?
H'LO! YES. THIS IS JOE. WHO IS THIS?
WHO IS IT?
MABEL? MABEL WHO? NO! THIS IS NOT JOE LILLOVITCH! YOU GOT THE WRONG NUMBER.
WHO IS MABEL?
I DON'T KNOW WHO MABEL IS ANY MORE THAN YOU KNOW WHO JOE LILLOVITCH IS.
I WISH I'D TAKEN THAT CALL. I'LL BET I'D HAVE FOUND OUT

DIXIE DUGAN — Show You — By J. P. McEvoy and H. J. Striebel

WHEN I BROUGHT STEVE HOME FROM THE WAR I JUST COULDN'T LEAVE THOSE HOMELESS LADS BEHIND
WHAT ABOUT YOUR ESTATE?
IT'S BEEN CLOSED FOR YEARS--YOUR FIRST JOB IS HELPING ME OPEN IT
THAT'S SIMPLE
OH IS IT?
COME WITH ME AND I'LL SHOW YOU WHAT I MEAN

RIGHT AROUND HOME — By Dudley Fisher

UNA, CAMPSON! WHAT ARE YOU DOING?

I WOULDN'T CUT IN ON JOE IN A MILLYUN YEARS--BUT SHE DON'T MEAN NOTHIN' THIM--HE'S COMPLETELY NUTS ABOUT ANN HOWE--
AN' I'VE BLEW ME TOP ABOUT NADA--BOY--IF THIS HERE'S LOVE--I GOT IT BAD--LES SEE--WE WENT UP THAT WAY--
THEN WE WENT DOWN--GOSH, ALL THESE ROCKS LOOKS TH' SAME--HOKY SMOKES--I DON'T THINK I KNOW WHERE I AM!--

JANE ARDEN — Poor Tired Flora — By Monte Barrett and Russell Ross

WE'VE SOME PAPERS TO FINISH UP, MR. STUN--THANKS JUST THE SAME--
TUT-TUT--IT'S QUITTING TIME--CAN'T I GIVE YOU GIRLIE A LIFT HOME?
OH, I WANT TO MAKE A GOOD START ON MY WORK--NO MATTER HOW TIRED I AM--
TIRED? SEE HERE--I DON'T WANT MY PEOPLE OVER-WORKED--
I'M NOT TIRED--AND I WANT TO FINISH THIS-- IF JANE THINKS IT'S ALL RIGHT--
WELL IF YOU INSIST--BUT I THINK I'D BETTER TAKE MISS FLORA HOME--

DONALD DUCK — Grandma Goes A-Milking! — By Walt Disney

MORNIN', GRANMA, HAVE A GOOD REST AFTER YOUR TRIP?
OH, LANDS, YES! WE NEVER SLEEP THIS LATE ON THE FARM!
ISN'T THERE SOMETHING I CAN DO TO HELP?
YEAH, Y' MIGHT STEP OUT BACK AND BRING IN THE MILK!
WELL, WHERE IS IT? I'VE LOOKED EVERYWHERE!

SUPERMAN — Hear Superman 5:45 P.M. Today—WOL — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

--AND ALL BECAUSE I COULDN'T RESIST THAT PLEADING LOOK IN LOIS' SOFT BROWN EYES!
DID I SAY 'SOFT BROWN EYES'?!? SOFT BROWN EYES?!?
I'VE BEEN VICTIMIZED! THAT WASN'T LOIS AT ALL! THAT GIRL HAD BLUE EYES!!!
BUT THE IMPOSTOR SUCCEEDED IN HER EVIL PLANS! I'VE DESTROYED THE BRIDGE---AND WHAT CAN I DO ABOUT THAT?!?

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED — By Zane Grey

THERE! THESE CLOTHES HIDE MY UNIFORM.
BUT, KING--THAT WON'T HELP US STOP DIABLO'S RAID ON THE RANCH!
NO, KID, BUT... WAIT! MAYBE WE CAN GET OUT OF THIS PRISON!
MEANWHILE, TWO MILES AWAY AT WILD HORSE RANCH
BOSS! LOOK UP THERE!
CHIEF THREE HORN'S IN JUNG AND THEM GYPSIES WE CHASED OFF!
I DON'T LIKE THE LOOKS OF THIS, MEN!
